

PEACE EXPECTED AS CONFERENCE GOES ON

EUROPEAN POWERS OPTIMISTIC OVER RESULT OF BULGARIAN AND TURKISH NEGOTIATIONS.

SIGNATURES AWAITED

Only Difficulty Now Remains Is Servian-Austro-Hungary Strife For the Right of Seaports.

London, Nov. 30.—A slight relaxation of tension in the international political situation has come today with the optimistic announcement from official sources in Constantinople that negotiations between the Bulgarian and Turkish plenipotentiaries at the village of Bagatze on the Tebatatja lines are likely to result in a speedy signature being given to the terms of an armistice.

The real menace to European peace, however, in the shape of the Austro-Servian difficulty still persists. The assertions of the rulers of Austro-Hungary and Russia, the two great empires most immediately concerned that they desire to maintain peace have not put an end to their active preparations for war.

Await Decision.

The diplomatic world anxiously is awaiting confirmation of the optimistic views expressed in the Ottoman capital as to the probable result of the parley in the parlor car behind the Tebatatja fortifications.

Continue Bombardment.

Rieka, Montenegro, Nov. 30.—The bombardment of the Turkish fortress of Scutari was resumed by the Montenegrins today. Their artillery has been reinforced. King Nicholas with his staff has left for Grusa near Scutari of superintending the operations of the besieging army.

Name Delegates.

The Montenegrin government has designated three delegates to proceed to Sofia to take part in the peace negotiations.

Montana Reported.

Washington, Nov. 30.—The cruiser Montana reached Port Said today on her journey to the coast of Asia Minor to protect Americans. The Tennessee which left Malta yesterday will arrive at Smyrna tomorrow.

Former Sweetheart of Jack Johnson, Left in Custody of Mother, Has Disappeared.

Chicago, Nov. 30.—Lucile Cameron, former sweetheart of Jack Johnson, negro pugilist, has disappeared. Her mother, Mrs. F. Cameron-Falconet, into whose custody the girl was given by the federal court, returned to her home in Minneapolis grieving for her daughter. The association of the white girl with the negro pugilist was the cause of charges of violation of the Mann law being made against Johnson. In the early stages of the prosecution the Cameron girl was regarded as a most important witness for the government. Later other charges were made against Johnson and the girl's testimony was valued less highly by the prosecutors.

NO SIGNIFICANCE TO VISIT OF WARSHIPS

Navy Department Says Mexico Need Have No Apprehension Over Visit of Four Battleships.

Washington, Nov. 30.—The proposed visit of four American battleships to Vera Cruz which is reported to have caused some apprehension in Mexico is entirely without political significance. It was stated by the navy department today that the battleships Kansas, Michigan, Vermont, and South Carolina will touch Vera Cruz as one of the seaports included in the itinerary of gulf ports to be visited by this section of the fleet. The vessels will reach Vera Cruz Dec. 12, and leave two days later. They will make no other Mexican port.

T. C. HENDLEY SELLS OUT STOCK IN BELOIT NEWS

Beloit, Nov. 30.—Announcement was made this afternoon of the retirement from the business management of the Beloit Daily News of T. C. Hendley, member of the republican state central committee. Mr. Hendley's stock was purchased by D. B. Worthington, who now holds two-thirds of the stock. The deal was made several months ago, but was not announced until today. Mr. Hendley's plans for the future are indefinite. Worthington announces that there will be no change in the policy of the paper.

NOVICE SLICES FINGERS WHILE MAKING SAUSAGE.

Neenah, Nov. 30.—The first attempt to make sausage proved had for Chas. Becker. While operating a cutting machine his hand became caught in the knives and four fingers and part of the thumb were ground up. While at work in a mill, M. Rorsrud lost part of a hand when it got caught in machinery.

UNIVERSITY TEACHERS OF JOURNALISM MEET

Fifteen Institutions to be Represented at Conference at Chicago Today —May Organize.

Chicago, Nov. 30.—Teachers of journalism from fifteen American universities, colleges and other educational institutions met here today at the Hotel Sherman to form a permanent organization and discuss various questions as to the best methods to be employed in teaching practical journalism. Professor Fred Newton Scott of the University of Michigan, president and the following institutions were represented at the gathering: University of Michigan, Columbia University, University of Wisconsin, University of Illinois, University of Missouri, University of Oregon, Indiana University, De Pauw University, University of Kansas and the State Agricultural colleges of Iowa and Kansas. Dr. Talcott Williams, director of the Pulitzer School of Journalism of Columbia University, delivered one of the most important addresses, on "Technical Instruction in Journalism."

Among those who discussed various phases of the instruction in practical journalism at the morning and the afternoon sessions were Prof. Merle Therpe, University of Kansas; Walter Williams, University of Missouri; J. W. Piercy, Indiana University; F. W. Scott, University of Illinois; Charles Dillon, Kansas Agricultural College; the Rev. J. E. Copus, Marquette University, and N. W. Barnes, De Pauw University.

MICHIGAN IGNORES PLEA FOR RETURN

Faculty Representatives of Michigan Ignored Pleas For Return of Wolverines to the "Big Nine."

Chicago, Nov. 30.—Faculty representatives of the University of Michigan, ignored the plea of 12,000 students representing six universities of the Western intercollegiate conference by refusing to make overtures for returning to the "big nine." Not a word of the proposed return of Michigan was brought up at the final session of the faculty representatives of the conference today. It was expected that two members of the Michigan alumni would appear before the conference body and open negotiations, but they failed to appear.

COMMITTEE TO WORK ON TARIFF MEASURE

Senator Simons of North Carolina Announces That Tariff Changes Will Be Considered at Once.

Washington, Nov. 30.—Senator Simons of North Carolina, who had charge of the democratic tariff bills in the senate last session and who may be chairman of the finance committee after March 4, said today he would urge that democratic members of the finance committee and committee on ways and means get together early next week and begin work on the tariff measures to be considered at the extra session of congress. Whether the tariff should be considered schedule by schedule or in a general bill he was not ready to say. He thought, however, that a majority would want to take up the schedule separately, using the measure at the last sessions as a basis for new tariff legislation.

GREEN BAY MILK DEALERS TO RAISE THEIR PRICES

Green Bay, Nov. 30.—Retail milk dealers in Green Bay have announced that tomorrow a price of milk and cream will be advanced 1 cent and 4 cents per quart respectively. The reason given by the dealers for boosting the price of milk and cream is that living expenses are higher with them and they are obliged to pay the farmers a higher price than last year.

COURT ENJOINS AN ORDER OF RAILROAD COMMISSION

Madison, Nov. 30.—Judge E. Ray Stevens today granted a temporary injunction restraining the railroad commission from enforcing its recent order requiring the Duluth street car company to issue six tickets for a quarter on the Superior lines.

DEFICIT IN BANK RESERVES FOR FIRST TIME IN YEARS

New York, Nov. 30.—The statement of the actual condition of clearing house banks and trust companies for the week (five days) shows a deficit in actual cash reserve for the first time since January 4, 1888. The amount of the deficit is $5,057,950.

Calgary, Alta., Nov. 30.—In accordance with a resolution passed by the Ministerial Association of this city recently, tomorrow will be observed as "Political Day" by the churches of the city. Thirty of the leading churches of Calgary will advise their congregations how to vote at the coming municipal elections. The ministers have agreed to refrain from personalities and to devote themselves strictly to the discussion of principles. Methods of effecting a number of suggestions civic reforms will also be discussed from the pulpits.

LA CROSSE GIRL IS HELD AS A WITNESS

Against Man Who Persuaded Her to Leave Home and Who is Charged With Mann Act Violation.

La Crosse, Nov. 30.—Miss Marjorie Adams, aged 20, who disappeared from her home in Madison, Wis., last summer at the instigation of Charles Nevel, a soldier, who attended the maneuvers at the Sparta military reservation with his regiment from Michigan, is being held in jail at Sault Ste. Marie, where she will be called upon to testify against Nevel, who is charged with violating the Mann white slave act. Miss Adams joined Nevel at Sparta and running short of funds he persuaded the girl to come to La Crosse, where she secured work as a domestic until she could secure enough funds to take her to the Michigan city, where she was induced to join Nevel. Investigation of the case by Michigan police resulted in Nevel's arrest by the United States authorities and Miss Adams' detention as a witness against him at the hearing which will be held in Sault Ste. Marie. Nevel is a soldier at Fort Brady.

GRAVE OF BROTHER ENDS LONG SEARCH

Minneapolis Woman Finds Last Resting Place of Relative Killed in Vernon Disaster.

Marionwood, Nov. 30.—After 25 years Mrs. Edmond Longyear of Minneapolis has found her missing brother John Patton who left home a quarter of a century ago and who was one of the victims of the steamer Vernon disaster on Lake Michigan. Mrs. Longyear with her husband came to Two Rivers and established the identity of her brother as one of seven victims who are buried at Two Rivers, their graves marked as "unknown dead." Patterns grave was No. 6 of the seven and personal effects taken from his body at the time it was found on the beach afforded a means of identification. Mr. and Mrs. Longyear have sent a check of $100 to the city of Two Rivers for improvement of the cemetery. A monument has recently been erected by the city to mark the graves of the unknown dead of the Vernon.

NAVY DEFEATS ARMY BY A CLOSE SCORE

Won By a Score of 6 to 0 on Franklin Field This Afternoon—Army Nearly Makes Score.

Philadelphia, Nov. 30.—The army and navy played each other to a standstill in three periods in their annual game on Franklin field this afternoon. The army, while it failed to score, showed superior playing ability both in rushing the ball and in punting. The navy line appeared to be weak and unable to successfully withstand the onslaughts of the army's plunging backs. The ends also appeared to be unable to keep the army from making ground around the two wings. Early in the first period Keyes of the army missed a field goal by a hair's breadth and making the army came close to making a score when one of her forwards recovered a block kick about fifteen yards from the navy goal. The final score was navy, 6; army, 0.

MULVANE URGES FOR IMMEDIATE ACTION

Manager of Western Tail Headquarters Confers With President Regarding Party Reorganization.

Washington, Nov. 30, David W. Mulvane, of Kansas, who had charge of the western republican headquarters at Chicago during the last campaign, reached Washington today to urge upon President Taft that republican headquarters should be opened in Washington as soon as possible and that a publicity bureau also should be organized. He discussed political conditions with the president following the cabinet meeting.

INAUGURATION WILL BE HELD IN APRIL

Wilson Says He Will Be Sworn in March 4, But Ceremonies Will Be Held Last Thursday in April.

Hamilton, Bermuda, Nov. 30.—Gov. Wilson today declared that he would agree to being sworn in as president of the United States on March 4 next, but that the ceremonies in connection with the inauguration would be held on the last Thursday in April. The president-elect has received more than 200 letters containing advice regarding legislation. Pointing to a mass of correspondence Mr. Wilson said, "That is the idea some American people have of giving a man a vacation." Mr. Wilson today paid seven dollars excess postage on newspaper clippings, speculating as to probable cabinet appointments. "If you see that Wilson has invited this or that man to come to Bermuda, relative to appointment in the cabinet," commended the governor, "you may be sure that the news came by way of Constantinople or the windward passage."

DECLINE IN FRENCH BIRTH RATE SUBJECT FOR INVESTIGATION

Government Believes it Has Hit Upon Practical Plan of Procedure—Military Power Menaced.

Paris, Nov. 30.—At last the government appears to have hit upon a practical plan for the investigation of the causes for the declining birth rate. It is hoped that the remedy also will be found. For years thinking Frenchmen have been distressed at what has come to be described as the depopulation of France, but all attempts to arrest the decrease have been half-hearted and have resulted in measures that proved ineffective. Mr. Klotz, the minister of finance, who worked out the present plan, says that the problem is one of national defense.

It is now proposed to establish, under the chairmanship of the minister of finance, a commission composed of experts in each branch of the subject, who will be able to deal effectively with the social, military, legal and scientific sides of the question. The commission will be divided into five committees. The first will take up the administrative and legal side and inquire into naturalization and marriage laws and the question of infanticide and kindred evils.

The second committee will consider the military aspect of the subject, including the effect of the birth rate on recruiting and army organization. The third will study infantile mortality, hygiene, intemperance and tuberculosis, together with question of assistance to mothers and of the proper education of the sexes. The fourth will study how best to encourage the growth of large families and how to assist those which have become too large for the financial means of the parents.

At the same time the government is giving closer attention to the welfare and morals of the youth of the country. In order to discourage clandestine meetings between boys and girls and make difficult the exchange of correspondence that might not be approved by parents or guardians, the French post office has adopted a regulation prohibiting boys under 16 years of age and girls under 18 years receiving letters through the general delivery department.

Another new postal regulation is likely to receive less popular approval, particularly among tourists. It stipulates that persons applying for mail at the general delivery must produce documentary legal evidence of their identity. Unfortunately what constitutes legal proof of identity is left to the discretion of the postal employees. Permanent foreign residents can obtain a registration certificate that will answer the purpose, but travelers in France are not accorded this privilege.

An idea of what may be expected is suggested in the recent experience of an American resident who sought to cash a misdirected telegraphic money order. In vain he produced in succession a bank passbook, several rent receipts, a number of envelopes addressed to him which had passed through the post, a rider's card for the Bibiethèque Nationale (obtainable by foreigners only through their ambassadors), visiting cards, tax payment receipts, a club membership card, a commuter's card, with photograph, a summons to appear before the police judge, a subpoena, a gas deposit receipt, a journalist's police pass signed by the prefect of police, a dog license, and a birth certificate.

Finally he discovered that the janitor of his lodgings was a postman and the influence of 50 cents proved the solution of the trouble.

The superstitious are finding satisfaction in report that the hand of the King of Bulgaria was read some time ago by a young army officer, who saw in it a meteoric career for 1912, but something in accord with the sinister reputation of thirteen for the year following.

A legend says that a king named Michael will rule as Constantinople and the Russian, who believe this story reflect that the grand duke in the crown prince, is destined to raise the cross under the dome of St. Sofia, where Mahomet II. rode on horseback and thus, it is alleged, profaned the temple of the Christian faith.

NEENAH, PAPER COMPANY TO INCREASE OUTPUT.

Neenah, Nov. 30.—It was announced today that the Lake Side Paper Company which has been doing business less than a year, in the new mill will install another $60,000 paper making machine and also construct a large addition to the finishing room.

TO TEST NEWSPAPER PUBLICITY MEASURE

Brief Filed With Supreme Charging Unconstitutionality of Recent Enactment.

Washington, Nov. 30.—Former assistant attorney general James M. Beck, filed today in the supreme court his belief in the case brought by the Lewis Publishing Company to test the constitutionality of the newspaper publicity law. The brief discusses fully the power of the federal government indirectly to censor the press through the regulation of the mails and reviews at length the struggles in England and America to free the press from restraint and the meaning of the first amendment forbidding any abridgment of the freedom of the press. Mr. Beck argues that as the constitution did not expressly give any power to regulate journalism any attempted regulation can only be justified as a necessary and proper means to carry out some federal function.

The brief reviews all of the decisions of the supreme court numbering over twenty in which congressional acts have been invalidated by the supreme court for want of constitutional power, and it claims that the present law is within the doctrine of those decisions.

Mr. Beck strongly denounces the idea that congress can so use its powers as to accomplish unconstitutional ends. This the brief calls "nullification by indirection" and it cites the commodities clause of the Hepburn bill and Senator Beveridge's child labor bill, and the present newspaper law as striking examples of an attempted perversion of federal power to accomplish ulterior and unconstitutional ends.

DYNAMITE OPERATORS THREATENED WOMAN

Mrs. Alta Hockin on Stand in Conspiracy Case, Relates Experience With Union Workmen.

Indianapolis, Nov. 30.—Threats of death for telling about explosions were related by Mrs. Alta M. Hockin at the "dynamite conspiracy" trial today. Mrs. Hockin, attended by a nurse and suffering from injuries received in a recent shooting affair, was carried into court on a cot. A few days before four explosions caused a loss of $15,000 on the property of Albert Von Spreckelsen in Indianapolis in 1909, Mrs. Hockin testified, she was told by Ernest G. W. Basey, an iron workers' union official, that "something was going to happen," on jobs where non-union workers were employed.

"He told me to look in the news paper the next day and read about it," said Mrs. Hockin. "In the paper I saw nothing. Then he told me it did not come off that night, but to watch the next night. I did, and about midnight heard the explosion. Basey called me up on the telephone and told me I must keep my mouth shut. He said if I did not I would be killed." The witness said she was shot several weeks ago while hunting.

Raymond J. Burns, who said he knew the identity of the Los Angeles Times dynamite five months before the arrest, told today of more conversations which he said he had with Herbert S. Hockin, indicted secretary of the ironworkers' union. Burns described Hockin as a "spy" within the ranks of the union officials.

MOB KIDNAP NEGRO FOR SHOOTING WOMEN

Black Man Hanged For Fatally Injuring Two White Women at Cordelle, Georgia.

Cordelle, Ga., Nov. 30.—Chestly Williams, the negro who shot two white women near Rhine and assaulted one of them, was dragged from the court house at McRae today and lynched by a mob. Neither of the negro's victims is dead, but it is said they cannot survive.

MANITOWOC MAY ISSUE BONDS TO CARRY ON SUIT.

Manitowoc, Nov. 30.—To meet the demands of a suit started against him and fourteen members of the city council, for transferring funds, Mayor Henry Stolze, it is said, will recommend to the council a special bond issue of $21,000 to provide money to replace funds taken from the city and general funds.

A special election will be necessary and may create an issue for a sharp fight in the council. Mr. Stolze in a public statement declares that the suit started is backed by anti-municipal ownership forces of the city to block the purchase of the electric lighting property.

TELEGRAPH OFFICIAL DIES AT MILWAUKEE HOSPITAL.

Milwaukee, Nov. 30.—Hiram G. McGill 53, superintendent of the second division Postal Telegraph Company with headquarters in Chicago, died early today at a Milwaukee hospital following a short illness the result of stomach trouble. An effort was made to save Mr. McGill's life by the transfusion of a pint of blood from the veins of his son without avail.

MAY PROHIBIT SALE OF PARLOR MATCHES

"Strike-on-the-Box" Brand May Be Required Following Hearings Before Insurance Commission.

Madison, Wis., Nov. 30.—The hearings before the legislative fire insurance investigating committee have indicated that the committee is considering seriously a recommendation to prohibit the parlor match and to require that hereafter in Wisconsin the sale of matches be confined to the safety match or "strike-on-the-box" matches. The committee has been asked to recommend the uniform bill endorsed by the National Board of Fire Underwriters, which requires that a safety match shall be ignited only by heat at a temperature of less than 200 degrees. The bill carefully provides for the manner in which matches are to be packed and sold by the manufacturer to protect fully the merchant in handling the matches.

The committee is also working in cooperation with the state industrial commission on the question of a building code and on what may be required in the way of provisions in the construction of buildings looking to protection against fire.

MICHIGAN ANXIOUS TO RETURN TO FOLD

Considered Doubtful Whether Wolverines Would Submit to Strict Conference Rules.

Chicago, Nov. 30.—The question of the possible return to the fold of the University of Michigan was expected to be the leading topic of discussion at today's meeting of the faculty representatives of the Western Intercollegiate Conference Athletic Association. Gossip had it that Michigan was anxious to get back into the organization and that the leading conference schools were agreed to have them, but the question as to whether the institution would be willing to make the concessions necessary for conference rule was considered doubtful.

TO BUILD RAILROAD THROUGH MOROCCO

Franco-Spanish Treaty Provides For Line Extending Between Fez and Tangiers.

Paris, Nov. 30.—The immediate construction of a railway from Tangier to Fez, the capital of Morocco, is provided for in the supplementary articles of the Franco-Spanish treaty in reference to Morocco. The text of which was published here today. The new railway with its branches extending to upper parts of Morocco will mean the opening up of the heart of the Moroccan empire to communicate with the outside world as well as giving great opportunity for the extension of commerce and industry.

WOODMEN COMPLIED WITH COURT ORDER

Official Statement Withdrawing Order of New Insurance Rates Is Issued by Executive Office.

Rock Island, Ill., Nov. 30.—An official statement withdrawing the order of new insurance rates as adopted by the head camp of the order in Chicago was issued from the executive offices of the Modern Woodmen of America today. The action was a sequel to a recent court decision in Springfield, Ill., nullifying enforcement of the new rates.

MONGOLIAN CITY IS TAKEN BY CHINESE

Tribesmen in Vicinity of Kobdo Lay Down Arms Without Resistance.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 30.—The Mongolian city of Kobdo, has been occupied by the Chinese troops without resistance from the inhabitants according to a dispatch from Urga, the capital of Mongolia.

The tribesmen in the vicinity willingly laid down their arms.

EXTREME VIOLENCE CAUSED BY SCOTCH SUFFRAGETTES.

Aberdeen, Scotland, Nov. 30.—Military suffragettes today brought about two scenes of extreme violence in which a woman's shoes and a horse-whip were used as weapons.

The first outbreak occurred when three of the women who had been caught last evening in possession of explosives in the music hall where chancellor Lloyd George was to speak were brought up before the magistrate. After hearing the evidence the magistrate remanded them for further inquiry.

DEATH HELD THE WINNING HAND IN GAME OF CARDS.

Oshkosh, Nov. 30.—Albert Reuchel, aged 33, was dealt a death hand last night while playing cards in the saloon of Gustaf Joke. He had just won the stakes and was reaching forward for the chips when he sank back in his chair and expired without uttering a sound. Death was due to heart failure.

RURAL CREDIT BANK BILL WILL BE DRAWN FOR GREAT BRITAIN

President of Board of Agriculture Announces That He Will Introduce Measure in House of Commons.

London, Nov. 30.—The president of the Board of Agriculture announces that he will soon introduce in the House of Commons a bill providing for the establishment in England and Wales of a system of rural credit banks, similar to those in the Scandinavian countries and Germany.

It is expected that certain of the big joint stock banks of London will be asked to co-operate in providing funds for these institutions, which will thus have a better start than those which have been started practically as local lending agencies. Many suggestions have been offered for the original bill, but it seems to be agreed that the land banks shall in their working be as co-operative as possible.

That the east end of London contains a large population which never becomes naturalized is indicated by the fact that in the Whitechapel district, where Sir Stuart Samuel may be compelled to stand for reelection because of the dealings of his bank with the supply of silver coinage for India, in a population of 80,000 there are only 4,000 electors. This means that there are thousands of Jews and other foreigners in the district who remain permanently alien population. It is believed that Sir Stuart Samuel will have no difficulty in retaining his seat which he won by a majority of 500 at the last election.

The reorganization of the University of London, which will take place when a new site is selected for the university buildings, will witness a hot fight between the interests which wish to abolish the external classes of the university and those who want to keep intact the only means in England whereby the poor may obtain the rudiments of a collegiate education. The external system of the University of London is an application on a larger and more practical scale of the system of university extension lectures prevailing in America. Many of these courses are given in different parts of London and facilities are provided for students to do independent work away from the regular headquarters of the university. The continuance of this external side of the university has been strongly condemned by certain influential members of the commissioners of the institution, but the door which has been invitingly held open to so many poor students will not be closed without a strenuous protest from thousands of the sons and daughters of the university.

The industrial invasion of Egypt by the Germans is seriously disturbing English financial circles, especially in view of the fact just disclosed that one of the biggest German agricultural concerns in Upper Egypt was originally financed by London banks.

The agricultural possibilities of the region in which the Germans are working was discovered by an expert English irrigationist, who strolled into the country in his way from some irrigation works in Asia Minor. He stopped near Luxor and after prospecting about in a desultory manner discovered an artesian well. Shortly after this discovery, according to his story, a German commercial traveler, wandered into his camp and the lonely Englishman in the pleasure of seeing a white man forgot his traditional aloofness and told him all about the possibilities of the country due to the discovery of artesian water. The German went on his way and the engineer lingered to search for the wonderful artesian water. Sometime later he found in the region. In six months the German was back with the necessary equipment and machinery for boring wells and within two years the desert was a garden, paying 20 per cent dividends to its German owners. On his belated return to London the disgraced engineer found that the German company, which had undertaken the work, had borrowed the money to underwrite its bonds at a low rate from London banks.

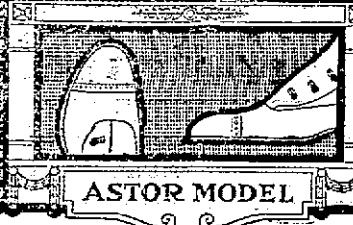

"BRIDGIE" WEBBER LEAVES FOR CUBA

Inform on Gun Men and Backer, With His Wife, Today Left New York For Indefinite Stay.

New York, Nov. 30.—Bridgie Webber, one of the quartet of informers who testified against Becker and the gun men sailed away for Cuba today with his wife. He seemed in great fear of being followed by gangsters and asked in a stage whisper at the pier if anyone had seen any members of the old "Jack Zelig" gang thereabouts. He got away unmolested, however, and said he did not know how long he would be gone.

MARINES GIVE PARADE AT NEW ORLEANS TODAY.

New Orleans, Nov. 30.—Thirteen hundred visiting blue jackets and marines paraded the streets of New Orleans today while thousands of persons from neighboring parishes and states looked on. The parade was reviewed by Mayor Berman, and Rear Admiral Fletcher at the city hall. The marines were from the battleships Minnesota, Kansas, Michigan and South Carolina anchored in the Mississippi.

French Chalk.

French chalk is especially good for cleaning embroidery that is too fragile to be washed with soap and water. The chalk should be made quite hot and sprinkled thickly over the embroidery, which is then rolled up carefully so that the chalk is inside. Allow it to stand in a dark place for a week or two, and then shake out all the chalk. This will leave the embroidery quite fresh.

THIRD APOLLO CLUB RECITAL ON MONDAY

Enrico Palmetto, Great Danish Tenor To Sing Monday Evening Before Local Musical Club.

On Monday evening, Dec. 2nd there will be given the third recital of the Apollo Club. The recital will be given by Mr. Enrico Palmetto, the great Danish tenor. Mr. Bruhl of Chicago, a very talented pianist will play his accompaniment and will also play two piano numbers.

Mr. Palmetto is said to have a voice of wonderful range and purity. Some even claim that his voice is equal to that of the world famous Caruso.

Miss Gertrude V. Van O'Halen, booking agent for Minneapolis Symphony

PALMETTO.
With Apollo Club at Library Hall, Monday Evening.

Orchestra who was in the city a few days ago stated the Apollo Club was to be congratulated for their ability to secure so talented an artist as Mr. Palmetto, as she is sure his wonderful voice would be one of the biggest hits of the series of recitals.

Of his work the Le Figaro, Paris says: "When Signor Palmetto made his first appearance at our matinee last May we predicted for him a great future. That we were right yesterday's ovation proved when this wizard of song appeared on the stage. His remarkably powerful tenor voice of heroic proportions, combined with his ability to select a program which preeminently pleased the audience, will soon secure for him a position as favorite in this city. The president awarded him the diploma of honor after his appearance."

"Every member of the Apollo Club should make it a point to be sure and attend this recital as he undoubtedly is the greatest tenor who has visited Janesville for years."

Mr. Palmetto has an accompanist, Mr. Martin Bruhl, who has a wide experience. The Burlington, Ia. Gazette says: "She (Schumann-Heink) voluntarily pronounced Mr. Bruhl's accompaniments very beautiful."

When the Thomas Orchestra was in this city this week arrangements were completed with the business manager for the appearance of seven of the musicians of their famous orchestra to appear before the Apollo Club Feb. 2, at which date they will fill the fifth number of the series of Club Recitals. The instruments that will be used in the February concert will be a piano, two violins, coronet, clarinet, zello and flute. By special arrangements Mr. Zukowsky of the Thomas orchestra, who is well known to the members of the Apollo club will be the leader for the evening.

To Remove Paint From Linoleum.

To remove the spots of white paint from linoleum, keep them saturated with turpentine until they soften, or if they are very old and hard, use equal parts of turpentine and ammonia. They will soon soften and easily rub off, then wash with warm water, and use a little soap, then rinse and wipe dry.

Has Pig for Her Pet.

Miss Ethel Albright of Palmyra, N. Y., has an unusual pet, a tame pig, which she raised by artificial means. It was taken from the litter when a few days old. The little animal shows great affection for its young mistress, following her about, as would a dog, and showing its jealousy of her other pets.

At the Bridge Club.

"Why did you prohibit jewelry at the meetings of your bridge club?" "It became too easy to signal for trumps. Nearly every one of the players wore a heart-shaped pendant, a solitary diamond, a marquise ring that looked like a spade and a clover-leaf brooch."

OBITUARY.

Patrick McCue.

Patrick McCue, a long time resident of Rock county, passed away at three o'clock this morning, having reached the advanced age of eighty-nine years. He leaves a son, Patrick McCue, Jr., who resides at Argyle. Funeral services will be held at St. Patrick's church at 10 o'clock Monday morning.

John Birmingham.

John Birmingham, an old resident of Janesville, died at his home, 553 South Jackson street, at about ten o'clock last night. Mr. Birmingham had been in failing health for a year, but his death was unexpected as he was able to be up and around yesterday and showed no sign of a change for the worse. Surviving him are two sons: Thomas Birmingham of this city, and Michael Birmingham of Milwaukee. His wife died about three months ago. Funeral services will be held at St. Patrick's church at nine o'clock Monday morning. Interment will be made in Mt. Olivet cemetery.

Courage of Their Opinion.

Thirty-five is a very attractive age. London society is full of women who of their own free choice have remained thirty-five for years.—The Tatler.

Mrs. Fred Laabs, 408 High Forest, Winona, Minn., states:—"My husband had kidney trouble with severe pain across his back and was miserable and tired out. His bladder acted irregularly and there was a brick-dust like sediment. Finally he took Foley Kidney Pills with the result that the pain left him, his bladder acted regularly and he was strong and well again." Badger Drug Co.

PERUNA CRITICS SAY

That: There was Nothing Wonderful in the Recovery of Mrs. Eberlein.

DR. HARTMAN REPLIES.

Of course my narrative concerning Mrs. Eberlein, of Pittsburg, who was rescued from apparent death by Peruna, has excited a good deal of discussion and comment. One critic has offered the following solution. He says that the reason Peruna cured Mrs. Eberlein at such a stage of the disease is explained as follows:

She was probably very weak. She became unable to expectorate. The consequence was huge accumulations of mucus and phlegm gathered in the lungs. On account of her weakness she was unable to expel it. It was slowly strangling her to death.

Peruna stimulated her, enabled her to cough up and spit out the accumulated phlegm. This explains why she was cured. There was no miracle about it. Nothing wonderful either.

To all of which I say, yes, of course. That may be the explanation. And yet it remains true that without the Peruna she would have died. It remains true that I got there just in time to save her life. The doctors had given her up to die. She was gasping for breath, unconscious, cold, in short, dying. However it is explained, the Peruna saved her life. Of course it did.

I do not believe in miracles myself. I believe there is a natural explanation for everything. Peruna helped Mrs. Eberlein to expel from her lungs the accumulated expectoration, and thus saved her life. Good!

I presume Mrs. Eberlein is just as thankful that she is alive with one explanation as with another, and I am just as thankful that I was able to cure her, whatever the explanation may be. Advertisement.

The Best Likeness of a Child Is a Photographer's Most Exacting Work

And, it is in the making of Children's Portraits that Mott excels.

Every attention and effort is given to secure unquestionably the best likeness of Children.

Those baby smiles—Save them now. Have us photograph them, and be assured of the best and truest likeness—one that you will want to preserve.

It will only be a matter of a very short time when those features of your Baby's face necessarily will be only a memory.

Little tots grow up surprisingly fast, and that little face which is so often before you now—the little tot that is your most priceless possession—will in a few years outgrow babyhood. Will you depend on memory for the baby face?

Before it is too late let us make a portrait of the little one that will preserve permanently the child as he is today. You will appreciate it, and in later years the child will appreciate it.

Those who have seen Jess Willard, the Kansas giant in action, speak well of the young aspirant for white hope honors. He stands six feet six inches in height, weighs about 235 pounds, and possesses a fair amount of skill for a comparative novice in the game. He made a good showing against Luther McCarty last August in New York, and some of the experts say he had the better of the ten rounds by a big margin.

"Seven years ago I took up drop kicking," recently remarked Charley Brickley, Harvard's star halfback, whose football was the feature of the 1912 football season. "My ultimate object was earning a place on a Harvard team that would ultimately defeat Yale. Since that time I have practiced conscientiously, always with this one object in view. The two essentials of drop kicking are coolness and speed in getting the ball away. Accuracy can be learned by constant practice. My football motto is, 'roughly speaking, 'Outguess your opponents, keep cool and use your legs.'"

TO ORGANIZE TEAMS AT THE ASSOCIATION

Basketball Fives to Be Organized at Y. M. C. A. Among Class Members.

Commencing next week, Physical Director T. C. Hartwell of the Y. M. C. A. will organize basketball teams among the members of all the classes of the association, and the winter season of indoor sports will be on. Leagues will be organized in the various departments, and a schedule of games played. In addition there will be the first and second teams of the association, which will be selected from the large amount of good material to be found among the members of the association.

Next Friday evening at the association will be given over to basketball, and two games will be played. The first and second teams of the association will clash in one contest, and two fives from the "B" Juniors will be pitted against each other in the second.

Next Saturday all members of the Junior classes, including the A, B, and Sub-Junior classes, will be taken on a cross-country run, providing the weather is favorable. A place a short distance from the city will be selected, and the run made there. The boys will take along a lunch, and games will be played in the afternoon.

Plans for a gymnasium exhibition to be given in January are being considered by Physical Director Hartwell, the exhibition to be representative of the work done in the various classes. He desires that all members of the classes attend regularly in order not to miss any of the work to be done previous to the exhibition.

Never in the history of baseball did pitchers show so well at the bat as this year. In the National league several twirlers showed themselves to be sluggers of no mean ability. Willie's batting average was .333. Hendrix went at a .322 clip; Crandall, .291; Mathewson, .275; Donnelly, .264; while Rucker, Robinson and Brennan each had an average of .254.

Here are some of the records made by American league pitchers: McConnell, .297; Wood, .290; Ford, .288; Mullin, .278; Dubuc, .276; Plank, .267; Hall, .267; Johnson, .264 and Coombs, .265.

Jim McCormick of Patterson, was the greatest pitcher of his day," says Manager McGraw of the New York Giants. "McGraw and Honus Wagner, the greatest ball player the world ever saw."

The University of Michigan would like to get back into the western conference. Athletics has suffered at that institution since it broke away some years ago. With no chance of forming an alliance with the big eastern teams, Michigan has to take what it can get in the way of games. This situation has proved highly unsatisfactory.

A peculiar knockout was recorded in an amateur bout at Toronto the other day. J. Harris, standing on his feet but not conscious of what he was doing or where he was, instinctively swung a right on Alf. Amunder's jaw, dropping him for the count. Harris didn't know he was the winner until so informed in his dressing room.

JOE HEALD BOUGHT A PROMISING FILLY

Noted Trainer is in Janesville to Make This City His Headquarters—Will Train Horses on Local Track.

After an absence of twelve years Joe Heald, one of the most noted horse men in the country, has returned to Janesville to make this city his home. He will train his string of horses on the track of the Park Association and his arrival here will be the means of bringing to the city some of the fastest steppers in the country. Mr. Heald has just purchased one of the highest bred fillies ever brought into Wisconsin, the mare arriving by American Express from Catskill, New York, and is now quartered at the track. It was foaled on April 20 1910, and its sire was Cobach by Locket, with a three year old record of 2:11 1/4. The first dam was Berranna, with a track mark of 2:15 1/4 and it is a half sister to Walter Cobach with a record of 2:04 1/4. It was bred and raised by Elias Reynolds of Catskill, New York. Horsemen who have seen the filly are loud in their praises, and Mr. Heald expects great things of his purchase. For several years Mr. Heald was trainer of James Butler's string and was with Alexander MacLaren of Buckingham, Quebec for nine years. Mr. Heald is enthusiastic over the new track, new barns and general conditions and his arrival here will be the means of inducing other horsemen to make Janesville their headquarters.

"Apple-Pie Order"

Every Saturday a Puritan dame, Hepzibah Merton, baked two dozen or more apple pies, which were to last her family during the week. Placing them on her shelves in the pantry, labelling each according to the day of the week on which it was to be used, and the pantry thus arranged, was said to be in apple-pie order.

USE FORWARD PASS TO FINE ADVANTAGE

Oshkosh Champion of State High School Eleven Because of Skill at This Play—Details of Thursday's Game.

The ability of the Oshkosh players to use the forward pass to secure long gains was largely responsible for the defeat of the Janesville boys in Thursday's game. Following is a detailed account of the game from an eye witness:

The real reason for the defeat of the locals was that they were unable to cope with Oshkosh's fast and snappy play. The game was far more closely contested and bitterly fought than the score of 38 to 0 indicates. Janesville outplayed their opponents in the third quarter and the backfield made consistent gains. Thousands of people were assembled and enthusiasm ran high. One of the novelties was an old fashioned stage coach with a large circular saw upon it. Several Oshkosh rooters displayed their loyalty by beating upon it with hammers. The field was covered with a light coating of snow which made footing and dodging uncertain.

Capt. Connell won the toss and chose to receive the kickoff. Falter received the kick on the 15-yard line and advanced it 30 yards before he was downed. Edler, Ryan and Falter plowed through their opponents for numerous gains until it seemed Janesville would run up a big score. Janesville missed her first chance to score when a long forward pass hit the ground and it was Oshkosh's ball in the middle of the field. Janesville held for downs and Kipper, boosted to Falter, who returned the ball 20 yards in a zig-zag run. Janesville lost the ball because of the inability of the line to hold their heavier opponents and Ryan punted.

On a forward pass Oshkosh gained 25 yards and Simpson scored the first touchdown. He had called for an end run and was about to pass the ball when he saw that play blocked. Turning swiftly he ran through tackle 30 yards for the first score. Simpson kicked goal.

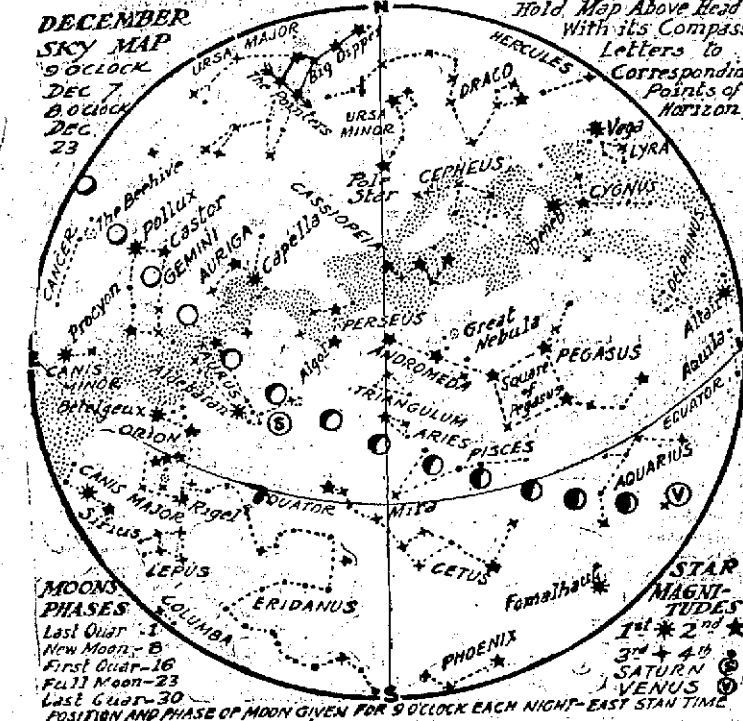

Oshkosh kicked to Janesville. On a forward pass Kuhlow gained 15 yards. Falter gained consistently around left end, making from 10 to 15 yards every try. Oshkosh was penalized severely for holding and off-side. Both teams played evenly and the ball zig-zagged in the center of the field. First half ended with the ball in Oshkosh's hands on their 45 yard line. Score: Oshkosh, 7; Janesville, 0.

Oshkosh kicked to Janesville. On a forward pass Kuhlow gained 15 yards but lost the ball on downs. Oshkosh scored their second touchdown on a long forward pass from Simpson to Webster. Falter tackling him on the line, Simpson kicked goal. Meeting with success with this mode of play they repeatedly gained on passes. On this form of play they made Janesville look foolish. First half ended with ball in Janesville's hands in the center of the field. Score: Oshkosh, 14; Janesville, 0.

The third quarter opened with Oshkosh kicking to Janesville. Falter received the kick and made 15 yards. Oshkosh was penalized 25 yards for holding and talking back to the umpire. Janesville's hold for downs. Dalton recovered a fumble. Edler and Falter gained 18 yards and Ryan added 15 yards on center. Janesville fumbled and the ball changed hands. Edler proved himself a star defense, for time and time again he would break through Oshkosh's line and throw the backfield for a loss. Dalton was hurt but stuck gamely to his job. Oshkosh advanced the ball to the 35 yard line when they tried a drop-kick, which went wide of the mark. It was Janesville's ball on the 20 yard line. By good end running and long forward passes Janesville advanced the ball 25 yards. Ryan dropped back for a kick. The ball sailed straight for the bar but was swerved from its course by the wind. Neither side was able to score in the third period.

The fourth quarter opened with the ball in Janesville's hands on Oshkosh's 50 yard line. It was five o'clock and darkness had settled upon the field, until it was hard to distinguish one player from another. Oshkosh was penalized severely for holding and rough playing. On an attempted forward pass by Oshkosh Captain Connell was badly hurt. Ryan, Falter and Connell, collided in mid-air. Connell went down in a heap and was knocked unconscious and was taken out. Mohr taking Atwood's place and Atwood shifting to end. Darkness made good playing impossible and Oshkosh scored their last two touchdowns in the last three minutes of play on straight football, being helped greatly by the fact it was hard to pick the man with the ball.

The Janesville boys played their best and proved themselves worthy foes. They had four good chances to score and failed, three on fumbles, once on downs and the crowd helping in an attempted forward pass.

THE HEAVENS IN DECEMBER.
December evening skies are of surpassing interest and beauty. Most of the brilliant winter constellations are above the eastern horizon at the hour of the map, and the big stars that characterize these groups flash in the cold, dry air like so many distant arc lamps.

Basily blurs of them all, Sirius, the Dog Star shines in the south-east. This is far the brightest star in our heavens and it is one of our nearest neighbors. There is reason to believe that it may be one of our sun's travelling companions in its journey through space. Even if this is not the case, the sun's rays must be deflected some millions of miles by the gravitational pull of this neighbor. So that we earth dwellers have more than a passing interest in the affairs of Sirius.

Spectroscopic observations show that our sun is moving across the universe at the rate of about eleven miles a second, carrying his family of planets and all their inhabitants with him, of course. There are indications that this motion is not in a straight line, but that its direction is modified by the attraction of the sun's nearest neighbors, with which he seems to form a sort of group or system. It is not supposed that this star system is constructed after the fashion of our solar system, where the sun is the supreme central gravitational power. The star system is a democracy rather than a despotism. Either two—the stars of a group are in revolution about their common center of gravity, which each helps to fix, or else they are moving forward together like bees in a swarm—toward a common destination, and each in a path entangled with and deflected by the paths of its neighbors. In either case Sirius is chiefly to be reckoned with by us, for besides being one of the half-dozen nearest known stars, it is probably the largest of our group.

May Belong to Another Group.
Some astronomers incline to believe that Sirius is one of another star flock, some of whose members have passed us, while others are still approaching our solar system. Of the seven stars that form the Big Dipper, five are decidedly nearer to us than one at the end of the half-dozen nearest known stars, it is probably the largest of our group.

Procyon, like Sirius, has a relatively dark companion, the probably existence of which was known many years before it was sighted. Certain minute yet definite changes in the position of Procyon first led to the belief it was swinging through the celestial dance in the grasp of an invisible partner.

Falter proved himself a star and best offense man on either team, his skillful running, stiffarming and line plunging being of the best quality. Reports certify that Falter was given right-half position on the all-state team and he certainly deserved it. Edler was the best man for defense, for he repeatedly broke up Oshkosh's shifts and formations. He also deserved a position as all-state player. Captain Connell showed himself to be a clean, fast, and sure player. Few gains were made around his end, and his ability to break up forward passes was exceptionally good. He won the respect of the Oshkosh players and rooters for when he was helped off the field; he had the sympathy of the entire spectators. Dalton and Cannon showed up well in the line, the former holding his own with a 170 pound opponent, and the latter blocked several punts and broke up his rival's formations. Connell, Falter, Edler, Ryan, Kuhlow, Cannon, Mohr, J. Stewart, and Cummings played their last game for the Janesville high school and go out with the idea that they, with the rest, gave Janesville their best efforts to win the coveted state championship.

But it was not until 1896 that the companion star was sighted at the Lick Observatory. The two revolve about each other in about forty years. The distances separating Sirius and Procyon from their companions are comparable to those between the sun and the outermost planets of the solar system.

Opera Glass Shows The Bees.
The Beehive, in the zodiacal constellation Cancer, is an interesting object for the opera glass. The constellation itself is rather inconspicuous, and the Beehive may be easily found by lining it up with Castor and Pollux. To the unaided eye it appears a nebulous patch of light. Under the glass the patch breaks up into a compact group of stars of the seventh and eighth magnitudes. As many as forty may be counted.

The Beehive has been known from ancient times under the name of Praesepe (The Manger) and the two little stars north and south of it as the Aselli or Little Asses. Praesepe was one of the first objects on which Galileo turned his newly invented telescope in 1610. He saw no more than a good opera glass will show.

A conjunction of Venus and the moon, always a beautiful sight, takes place on the evening of December 11. The moon passes Saturn on the evening of the 21st.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

Writing in the Christmas "Century" of the evolution of "The New York Newsboy," Jacob A. Riis compares conditions of today and those of years ago, occasionally telling newsboy stories of strong human interest. Herewith is an extract from his description of a newsboy's Christmas dinner.

The newsboys of New York were having their Christmas dinner, and I was bidden to the feast. I stood at the door and saw them file in, seven hundred strong, to take their places at the long tables. Last of all came the little shavers, brimful of mischief waiting to break out. The superintendent pulled my sleeve when he set eyes upon them.

"Watch out now," he said; "they'll be up to something."

I saw them eye the layout as they went down the line, where turkey and mince-pie stood waiting, and made quick, stealthy passes with their hands, but nothing happened until they had taken their seats. Then up went eight grimy fists, and eight agrieved voices piped out:

"Mister, I ain't got no pie!"

The superintendent chuckled.

"How is that?" he said. "No pie? There was one; I put it there myself, at every plate. Why, what is that?" And he patted each of the little rascals in the region of the bread-basket, where something stuck out in a lump inside the shirt.

"Me pie" was the unabashed reply. "I was afraid it 'ud get stole on me." There was just the ghost of a wink.

"Well," laughed the superintendent, "we'll forget it. It is Christmas. Go ahead, boys, with your dinner." And they fell to.

It was great. Talk about the charge of the Six Hundred. These were seven hundred, and they used their knives, their forks, and their tongues all at once and for all they were worth. The noise was deafening. You could not have heard yourself think. One alone among them all did no shouting. He devoured his dinner like a famished little wolf, and all the while he never took his ferret eyes from my face. It was in the days when New York had a militant police commissioner, who set the town by the ears every other day with his unheard-of ways of enforcing dead-letter laws, and rattled its dry bones. All of a sudden the boy snatched his fist from his mouth and pointed it straight at me.

"I know you," he piped in a shrill treble that cut through the babel of tongues like a knife. "I seen yer picture in de papers. Ye'r—ye'r—Teddy Roosevelt!"

Instantly there was the silence of the tomb in the big hall. Where just before one would not have known that a dray went over the pavement outside, one could all at once have heard a pin drop. Looking down the table where the miscreants sat who had tried to get a double allowance of pie, I saw something stirring, and the stolen pies appeared and were swiftly and silently deposited on the table. The dreaded name had brought them back even on a false alarm.

This little story dates back to the time when Theodore Roosevelt was Police Commissioner in the city of New York, and demonstrates that he possessed a personality which so impressed the boys of the street that one of them found no trouble in recognizing his double, at a newsboy's Christmas dinner.

The personality of Colonel Roosevelt, has long been one of his strong characteristics, and is largely responsible for his widespread popularity. It exerts a wonderful influence over people who come in close contact with him, and is greatly admired by a larger constituency.

There is a wonderful difference in men in public life. Some are approachable while others are so reserved and diffident that their closest friends hardly know them. President Taft possesses a genial smile, but is not a good mixer, and nobody would think of calling him "Bill." This has something to do with his lack of popularity, and with "Teddy," a prominent feature in the campaign, accounts largely for his minority vote.

The men who voted the republican ticket were not influenced by Taft, because he happened to be at the head of it, while many of the men who voted the progressive ticket, voted as they did, because they wanted "Teddy." When they discover that his last chance for being president, has expired, the progressive party will fall to be attractive.

There is a good deal of speculation, just now, about the future of the republican party and all sorts of predictions are made concerning it. Some contend that the old party is hopelessly dead, past resurrection, but this hope is father to a desire, and is not generally entertained.

The man who appointed delegates to his own convention, made his own platform, and nominated himself for president, has a personality which could readily believe that his old party is a thing of the past, and a few of his enthusiastic admirers, may be of the same opinion, but the rank and file of his followers were republicans before they were progressives, and they are republicans today.

The Hamilton club of Chicago recently sent out three thousand letters to republican leaders of both factions, inviting them to a harmony meeting to be held about the middle of January. This is the right kind of a move, and is bound to produce good results.

Senators Cummins, Borah and La Follette, and Governors Deneau and Hadley, while progressives in sentiment, believed that reforms could best be worked out within the ranks of the party, and so they can be. With the exception of La Follette, they were great admirers of Roosevelt, but refused to follow him as a bolter.

The republican party has a future, and the split in it is not serious. The one man responsible for it has had his day, as a great national leader, and while he may be slow to admit it, many of his supporters have already made the discovery, and will return to the old party long before the next national campaign.

But the newsboys who mistook Jacob A. Riis for Colonel Roosevelt, were not politicians. They were plain every day boys of the street, yet impressed with the same sort of regard for the colonel's personality that has made his word law, ever since he entered public life.

He had met them in police courts and pleaded their cause. He had talked to them about honesty and the many virtues which enter into the foundation of character building. His name, announced at the Christmas dinner, caused the pies to come out from hiding, not because the boys feared him, but because they respected and loved him.

There is a lesson in this little incident which is worth considering, for the boys and girls of our land represent one-fourth of our population, and in another decade many of them will be actors on the rapidly moving stage of life.

While it is not given to many of us to exert the same wholesome influence on this advancing army which Colonel Roosevelt possessed, it is possible for all of us to take more interest in child life than we do.

One of the easiest things for us to forget is, that we were ever children, and this is just as true of the average parent, as of the home, which has never been blessed by the presence of little people.

In talking with a merchant, the other day, he said: "There is scarcely an evening when I am down town that I don't see girls from our neighborhood wandering aimlessly about the street, and I often feel prompted to go to them and ask them if they hadn't better go home."

Who is at fault—the mothers? And so long as these conditions exist, the law can accomplish but little, by way of protection.

What is true of the girls, is true in a larger sense of the boys, and here is where the father's responsibility comes in.

If Colonel Roosevelt could command the respect of seven hundred street gammons, many of them without a home, it ought to be possible for the average father to win the love and confidence of the little circle where he presides.

The gift wants companionship, and the boy wants a comrade. The mother can fill the want of the girl, and no boy ever finds a comrade like his father, when the father is willing.

The crusade just now going on in the city, is largely devoted to protecting the boys and girls who should be so carefully sheltered in the home as to need no protection. This is not a flattering comment, but it is true.

The home life of today is degenerating, as is evidenced by other cities, which are now engaged in reform work. The city of Racine is conducting a "Masher Campaign" to rid the streets of loafers and street-walkers, while Madison recently found it necessary to help the homes to round up their children by passing a curfew ordinance.

It may sound like preaching for a secular paper to echo the thought of a local pastor, who said, the other day: "What the average home needs is more God in it, and until this fact is recognized and appreciated, reform will be more or less of a failure."

The age in which we live is fast, in more ways than one. Too fast for the pace of little feet, who attempt to follow in our footsteps. The God of our fathers is neither away, nor asleep. He was ever a safe counselor. Can we afford to ignore him?

IF NOT WHY NOT?

The suggestion comes from many quarters that inasmuch as the gauntlet is thrown down and the people are to decide whether law and order, or lawlessness shall prevail, that the city might better save the expense of another election by submitting the question of license or no license, and find out once for all who is running the town.

The suggestion expresses a growing sentiment, and is worth considering. It may not be possible to legally combine this issue, with any other, but it is bound to come in the near future if present conditions continue to exist.

When the list of names, which signed the recall petitions, is published, it will be found that they largely represent men who are chafing

The cheerful agent stepped into the business man's private office and set his grip on the floor.

"I wouldn't buy a phonograph on a bet," growled the business man, getting red in the face.

under restraint of law enforcement, and men who are in sympathy with them.

It may be possible that public sentiment, which has not yet found expression, is with this movement, but this is hardly thinkable. At any rate the license question would line up the forces and settle the problem.

The Gazette has never favored prohibition for Janesville, believing that wholesome regulation was better than prohibition, which did not prohibit, but if the city has come to a point in its history where lawlessness is demanded, then it is time to adopt radical measures, and call a halt.

The city of Rockford is a dry city, and never more prosperous than today. This is true of other cities in Illinois which were made dry by the aid of county option. When the law went into effect at Champlain, forty saloons retired from business. The college, located there, had an attendance of 3,000 at that time. Today the enrollment has doubled, and the reason given is that parents consider it a safe place to educate their children.

The time may not be ripe for such a movement in Janesville, but public sentiment is thoroughly aroused and what may happen the future alone can determine. The will of the people is sovereign, and they can have anything they want in the way of city government.

BAIRD FAILS TO GET DAMAGES FROM CARLE

VERDICT OF JURY FOR DEFENDANT ENDS ALIENATION OF AFFECTION SUIT.

WANTED A LARGE SUM

Sought $100,000 to Reconcile Himself and to Punish Mr. Carle For Alleged Actions—No Appeal Likely.

Arthur A. Baird of Los Angeles, Cal., lost his suit against Norman L. Carle of this city whom he charged with alienating his wife's affections. The jury brought in their verdict for the defendant immediately after supper last evening and this unusual case, without its sensational aspects, and which has been on trial before Judge Grimm in the circuit court for three days, came to an end. It is not probable that an appeal will be taken. The plaintiff sought $100,000 damages from his brother-in-law, Mr. Carle, claiming that the latter had maliciously caused the separation between himself and his wife. The defense sought to show, and the testimony offered had weight with the jury as the verdict indicates, that Mr. Carle acted at all times with the best interests of his sister at heart and urged her in good faith to adapt herself to the conditions of her new life and surroundings at Los Angeles.

Must Prove Malice. In instructing the jury late yesterday afternoon, Judge Grimm read the complaint and stated that the burden of the proof rested with the plaintiff. It was for the plaintiff's side to show, he said, beyond a reasonable doubt, that the separation of husband and wife was caused by the malicious interference of Mr. Carle, the defendant. He told the jury that there was a presumption in favor of Mr. Carle that he did not act maliciously in the case from the fact that he was a brother of the plaintiff's wife, and the plaintiff's side must also overcome this presumption. The entire case rested on the fact whether Mr. Carle acted with malice or in the utmost good faith as a brother toward a sister.

The addresses of counsel to the jury were rather long and consisted of a review of the testimony which, it is interesting to note, was given by only three witnesses: Mr. Baird on his own side, and Mr. Carle and Dr. Van Kirk on the defendant's side. In addition there were several depositions read and numerous letters offered in evidence.

Pleas of Attorneys. Mr. Jeffris made much of the magnanimity of the defendant in his action toward Mr. and Mrs. Baird. He dwelt on the testimony concerning Mr. Carle's visit to California in September, 1911, and his efforts to secure a happy and desirable home for his sister. Mr. Jeffris went further to show that the separation of Mr. and Mrs. Baird was plainly due to the plaintiff himself who by his words and actions estranged his "bride of four years." Mr. Jeffris spoke eloquently and feelingly and seemed plainly agitated.

Attorney Chas. E. Pierce closed the case for the plaintiff seeking to turn back the impression which Mr. Jeffris had given, toward the plaintiff's side of the case. Mr. Pierce charged in his address that the defendant had malice and did interfere to cause the separation of Mr. and Mrs. Baird and for the reason, he claimed, that he might continue to control the estate of the late Levi B. Carle, one-half of which was left to each Mrs. Baird and Mr. Carle. Mr. Pierce was dramatic and oratorical in his method of interpretation of his side of the case.

The members of the jury in this case were: John Camplin, Harmony; I. C. Elliott, Beloit; H. O. Ettestad, Bradford; William Leaver, Beloit; W. L. Austin, Beloit; M. Murray, Clinton; Samuel Goss and P. T. Nichols, Beloit; Ellsworth Caldo, Johnson; Edward Lawrence, Edgerton; Albert Merrill, Newark and C. J. Mills, Beloit.

There are but nine more cases on the jury calendar for the present term of the circuit court. It may take several weeks to clear up these matters, however, as there are a number of personal injury damage suits which usually are keenly contested. The six cases on the day calendar are as follows: Andrew Chaters vs. C. M. & St. Paul; Simeon Burdick vs. C. M. & St. Paul; Ethel J. Shade, Adm., vs. C. M. & St. Paul; Schnitt vs. Rockford and Interurban Co.; Ralph H. Harvey vs. Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Co., and Herman Karl vs. J. H. Burns.

BLIND STUDENTS AT NEW STATE CAPITOL

Superintendent Hooper Takes Party of Pupils Through Building Describing Each Department.

With minds alert to grasp every sight as described by their attendants, twenty-five students from the school for the blind at Janesville toured the new state capitol yesterday afternoon. Carefully feeling their way through corridors and up and down staircases, the sightless party visited every department and point of interest in the statehouse. The governor's reception room, alias "throne room," which has been called one of the most beautiful rooms in the world, had special interest for them. They were in charge of Superintendent J. T. Hooper and several assistants.

BRIEF LOCAL NEWS.

Pipe Organ Repaired: The large pipe organ at the Congregational church has been undergoing extensive repairs and it is now possible to operate the echo organ. A new motor has been installed and will operate both the main and the echo organ. The organist, E. J. Ballard, will give a brief recital Sunday afternoon preceding the vesper service.

Become Sorority Members: Misses Margaret Birmingham and Josephine Ellis were initiated into the Beta Gamma Sigma sorority yesterday afternoon. An elaborate banquet was served at the home of Miss Elizabeth Holmes and the two neophytes became members of the society after initiation ceremonies lasting for ten days.

Former Resident Weds: The announcement has been received here of the marriage of Fred W. Ayers, formerly of this city, and Miss Maude Dunlap of St. Cloud, Minnesota, on November 22.

Attended Railway Dance: Large numbers of people from North Fond du Lac, Milwaukee and Chicago attended the dance Wednesday night given by the local lodge of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen. The arrangement committee composed of D. P. Davey, Chairman; J. J. Dulin and J. J. Barry are entitled to much of the credit for the party's success.

River Falling: Light rainfall in the last three weeks has caused a drop in the level of the Rock river which has sunk to eight and one-half inches over the government mark in the upper dam.

Marriage Licenses: Marriage licenses have been issued at the county clerk's office to Chas. E. Hoppus and Bessie M. Brabst, both of the town of Avon; to Walter Todish of Menomonie, Wis., and Hazel Casey of Beloit; to Ray, Fellows of Center and to Jessie Morrison of Evansville; and to Glennie Bickel and Ella M. Schilling, both of Janesville. The latter couple secured a special permit.

Children's Story Hour: Fifty children this morning attended the story hour at the public library and were told the stories of "Sleeping Beauty," "The Big Red Apple," "Peter, Paul and Eileen" and "Little Gingerbread Boy," by Miss Agnes Buckmaster. Although no public announcement of the story hour was made, the children do not appear inclined to forget the regular time and place and most of them are regular attendants.

No Drunks Arraigned: No drunks were arrested last evening and in consequence there were none arraigned in the municipal court this morning. The number of lodgers is few for this time of the year because of the mildness of the weather.

TEN REASONS FOR THE RECALL.

There appears to be a general sentiment expressed throughout the city that the recall petitions which are being circulated are backed by certain elements whose feelings have been injured by the reform movements of the past sixty days or disgruntled citizens who feel they could govern the city better than it is now being handled.

The move for the recall can be summed up in the following ten reasons:

FIRST—Because two saloon licenses were revoked on account of the sale of liquor to minors, contrary to law. Shall we go back to it?

SECOND—Ordinance prohibiting women from entering saloons—made necessary because young girls were permitted to drink and carouse. Shall we go back to it?

THIRD—Closing of "sporting" houses and eviction of lewd women from the city. Shall we go back to it?

FOURTH—Throwing out all gambling devices from pool rooms, etc., made necessary because boys (minors) played these machines. Shall we go back to it?

FIFTH—Forcing the lawless men loafers from the streets and corners where they congregated to insult women as they passed by. Shall we go back to it?

SIXTH—A screen ordinance to remove all obstruction to a clear view of the saloon interior after closing time, Sundays, etc. This ordinance made necessary because of frequent violation of closing ordinance. Shall we go back to it?

SEVENTH—Because the city officials refuse to permit liquor to be sold at places other than those where license has been granted to sell. Do you want this changed?

EIGHTH—Because the city officials refuse to grant special privileges to certain saloonkeepers to keep open after hours. Do you want this to?

NINTH—Because street improvements have been made that the public have demanded for years—somebody's toes have been stepped on. Shall we stop all improvements?

TENTH—Because personal grievances are considered of more vital importance than public welfare. Are you in sympathy with this sentiment?

These ten reasons outline a few things the commission has accomplished. Many more could be mentioned.

MEMORIAL SERVICES OF ELKS TOMORROW

Janesville Lodge, No. 254 Will Hold Public Services at Theatre in Honor of Deceased Members.

Once a year the lodges of the Benevolent Order of Elks, all over the country, hold special memorial services for the departed brothers. The services are open to the public and are held on the first Sunday in December. Tomorrow Janesville lodge, No. 254, will conduct its services at the Lyceum Theatre at three o'clock. Reverend W. A. Goebel and Hon. John M. Whitehead will deliver the addresses and an especially fine musical program has been arranged.

Since the organization of the lodge of Elks in this city, the lodge has lost by death seventeen members. Of this number, three have been summoned within the present year, they being P. Mohanadel, Jr., William M. Bugh and Fred C. Stillson.

The program for the services tomorrow will be as follows:

REV. LAUGHLIN TO GIVE A SERIES OF SERMONS

Will Give Series on "Religion of Jesus and the Individual," During December.

I will begin a series of sermons next Sunday morning at the Presbyterian church on "The Religion of Jesus and the Individual," which will continue through the month of December. These sermons will deal with questions which frequently bother earnest Christian people and with matters of interest to all thoughtful persons. This series is preparatory to another which I wish to preach early in the New Year on "Christianity and Society." Recognizing that we are passing through a period of social and industrial unrest many persons are asking what part our religion is to play in removing the evils incident to the capitalistic system.

Many people are asking what part the church is to play in the removal of present evils in the industrial world. It will be my purpose to show that the spirit of Christianity must pervade all our industrial life. I will try to assist men who are doubtful as to the outcome of the struggle to a working faith.

Subjects to be treated during the month of December are as follows:

December 1: "What Jesus Thought of the Religious Life."
December 8: "Religion and Life Identical."
December 15: "Is the Religious Life Reasonable?"
December 22: "How the Religious Idea was embodied in Jesus."
December 29: "The New Appeal in Religion."

The music during the month of December promises to be exceptionally good. Professor J. S. Taylor will direct a chorus choir of twenty voices. The public generally is invited to attend these services.

J. W. LAUGHLIN.

Attention K. of P.
Next regular convention of Oriental Lodge, No. 22, K. of P., will be held Monday evening, Dec. 3. Election of officers for the ensuing year will take place; also final arrangements for the visit to Beloit Lodge on Dec. 3rd. The lodge has chartered a special car leaving the Myers House at 7:15 o'clock sharp and returning when all is over. All visiting Knights in the city are cordially invited.

EDITOR TO ADDRESS

M. E. BROTHERHOOD

The Rev. E. Robert Zaring, Editor of Northwestern Christian Advocate to be Here Monday.

The Rev. E. Robert Zaring, elected editor of the Northwestern Christian Advocate at the last general conference, will address the Brotherhood of the Cargill Methodist church at its regular monthly meeting to be held next Monday evening at the church dining room. The Northwestern Advocate has the largest circulation of any Methodist publication in this section of the United States and ranks very high among denominational publications. The Rev. Zaring has not yet announced his subject but it is understood that he will speak on some topic closely related to Brotherhood activities. He is a brother of E. K. Zaring of this city. The address will be preceded by a banquet to be held at 6:15 o'clock. All men of the church are invited to attend.

POPULAR SERVICE REPEATED AT TRINITY CHURCH.

The choral evening service which was introduced at Trinity Episcopal church on the first Sunday night in November proved very popular. It will be repeated Sunday night, December 1, at 7:30 p. m. and in addition there will be a special soprano solo.

LACK OF INTEREST IN ELECTION SHOWN

MADE MORE APPARENT AS NEW FACTS ARE DEDUCED FROM THE RETURNS.

VOTE NOTABLY SHORT

Northern Democrats in Majority in Congress For First Time in History of the Country.

(By Edith B. Usher.)—The lack of interest in the recent national election is more and more plain as the facts come to light. The Census Bureau, in advance of the election, had estimated that the vote that ought to have been polled at about 16,000,000. In 1908 the total vote was 14,882,078. This year, with nearly a million and a half of women eligible to vote for president, the total vote approximates only 14,000,000, a half million short of four years ago and Wilson's vote falls over 250,000 short of Bryan's. Sixteen years ago the total vote was 14,000,000 in round figures. What is true of Wisconsin is therefore true nationally this year. Wilson is not only to be a minority president, but he is in a minority of almost 2,000,000 on a phenomenally light vote.

There are other singular and interesting developments in the recent election. The majority of the democrats elected to the house are northern men, for the first time in history, and the president elect is the first one to be chosen since General Zachary Taylor in 1849, before Mr. Wilson was born, whose birthplace was south of Mason and Dixon's line. Virginia "the mother of presidents" comes in to her own again after sixty-four years. General Taylor was her last representative in the White House.

A recent report says that about 85 per cent. of the newspapers of the country have complied with the new publicity law as to filing their list of owners, circulation, etc. It is one of the absurdities of this law that it does not require magazines to file their circulation figures, if there is any circulation in public markets for the regulation of reckless and inspired publicity, the magazines have certainly furnished examples that are conspicuous. The fact that many of the leading magazines publishers have been called to book under the Sherman law suggests their true measure as moral exemplars, and also suggests the extent to which everybody is exposed to that danger. One happy effect of all these laws that go into the minutiae of private business, is the exposure of the details to every man's neighbors. We are illustrating that in the enforcement of our state income tax law. Men who have paid a small personal property tax are held up to public criticism because they pay a larger income tax. In most cases this is altogether unjust and, mischievous, and the doubtful morals of a state, inquisition that makes a New York man pay a second inheritance tax in Wisconsin, because his New York assessment exhibits the fact that he owns Wisconsin corporation securities, is an example of our general tendency to "go for" the other fellow. It is clearly double taxation and nobody denies the injustice of it, but the courts are compelled to uphold the state law.

One of the first things that happens under a new law like that regarding newspapers is for all that people at whom it is aimed to scurry around to find ways to evade it. A good many men who owned newspaper property six months ago, when the law is complied with, when we get clear around with this sort of moral uplift, by statute, the jails will not hold us all if we get our deserts. This is not just. I regard it as a serious matter, not because there is anything in the newspaper law that bothers me or my work, for I regard it as an advantage to do my work in the open, but the business man or trade union man who lives up to the letter and spirit of existing statutes needs examine himself, daily, and the more he examines himself the less he will blame his neighbors who get indicted. Large business of all kinds is organized on lines that make obedience to the laws difficult, and the talk about returning to competition, when every milk dealer in your own town, and every boot maker, asks a uniform price, under some form of understanding or agreement, is merely playing blind-man's bluff with existing facts that are known to everybody.

"Lake and Rail" Advertisement. That this paragraph is advertising does not minimize its importance to this city and state. In these days the good things that railroads do, they must, as a rule, tell about themselves. The things that are open to criticism they get, from all directions, like old boots at an alley cat, without effort on their part. It seems to me important to this state that the Erie Railroad has a "division," so to speak, running into Milwaukee, and though it is on the water, it isn't happily the sort of water that the railway critics "kick" about. A concrete statement of fact is worth a wagon load of generalities. Here it is. On Thanksgiving Day the Erie Railroad Transit Company's steamer Granville A. Richardson, left this port, for Buffalo on her last trip for this season with 110 car loads of freight, and today the Frederick D. Underwood, a larger boat, left on her final trip, with 175 carloads. These two vessels therefore took east the equivalent of three monster freight trains of western merchandise, mainly flour and grain products. And the thing Mr. W. J. Fitzgerald the Erie's busy steamboat agent takes particular pride in is that these cargoes make a complete clean-up of all the water freight the company agreed to move for its customers this season. The steamboat line has had several years in commission this year, one more than last, and business is gaining so another will be already the largest running between Buffalo and Milwaukee and Chicago.

The railroad situation generally has been a chief one this week, owing to the publication of the award of the arbitration committee of seven that has considered the demands of the locomotive engineers and the railroad objections to them. The fact that on the board were President Van Hise of the University of Wisconsin, and President Daniel Willard, of the B. & O. road, himself, only a few years ago, given the matter especial local interest. The representative of the engineers and Mr. Willard, the representative of the railroads, both objected to parts of the majority report, and the former made a separate minority report. Something of a raise was given the men. What looks like a recognition of the justice of the railroad claims for higher rates, which is significant, is found in fact that the poorer roads are the ones that must raise wages. Eastern people who are interested regard the decision as the most important affecting labor since the anthracite coal strike of 1902. It affects all the roads east of Chicago and north of the Ohio river and the Norfolk and Western road, and 30,000 men.

In the field of finance a flurry that sent call money up to 12 per cent on Wall Street one day early in the week, is another illustration of the way the brakes are applied the moment anything starts that looks like a bull move in speculation. An item that suggests a why for this conservatism is the sale of the New Haven road of $40,000,000 of 5 per cent notes at a figure that will yield purchasers more than 5 1/2 per cent. They are to mature in the spring of 1914, and three-fourths of them are to refund notes bearing 4 per cent interest. The result will be to increase the expenses of the road by $800,000. Within the next six months there will be over $200,000,000 of such railroad notes maturing. That the railroads, are compelled to sweat, thus, for their money seems to be largely because of public and legislative disfavor. There ought to be some reasonable way of remedying such conditions but one trouble seems to be that "too many cooks spoil the broth." The railroads more than any other, public service properties are subjected to new regulation rules every time they cross a state boundary, and besides the national commission is after them and the investing public is getting leery. Of course these extra costs will have to fall on the public or the roads will be in bankruptcy, and it looks sometimes as if the public are determined upon the latter. If so, we will all get our slice of it.

Short Notes.
A young Greek told me this week that 1000 Greeks had gone from Milwaukee to fight the Turk, and he added: "They clean our Turkey from Europe."
Motor licenses this year $136,220, corporation licenses $12,251 and a lot more such odd items of increasing state revenue show that the income tax is not the only source of new money.
Our local tax assessor now announces that more blanks will be sent to farmers this year. Election is over.
The meeting of the National Civil Service Reform League will be held here December 5 and 6.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES.
WHY WHO'S WHO.
(By Howard L. Rann.)
ONE of the most conspicuous victims of misplaced confidence in this country is Senator Jonathan Bourne of Oregon. Senator Bourne is one of the most guileless men in congress and believes absolutely in the rule of the people. He favors zen, and decided to try it out on the plain people. Jonathan's idea was that the voter should not be chased into the cornfield, bombarded with campaign literature and tempted with 5-cent cigars, but that he should be allowed to make up his mind in the privacy of his own conscience, with out being buttonholed rear and aft. So Jonathan did all his electioneering from Washington, at a total expense of $225.

Now, Jonathan's opponent was Ben Zelling, a Portland merchant prince with a heavy bank roll and a practical mind. Zelling had never met a cosmopolitan citizen and did not believe that one existed outside of the Smithsonian institute. So he went out after the votes with a red automobile and some fervent advertising matter, and removed Jonathan from the public gaze by a large majority.
But Jonathan was not satisfied. He threw a few stimulants into his cosmopolitan citizen, rolled up his sleeves, cleared his throat and ran on an independent ticket in the recent election. You know what happened. A large sliver from the democratic landslide hit both him and Zelling and sent a two-tailed relative of Thomas Jefferson to the senate. Jonathan took a spade and buried his cosmopolitan citizen as deep as he could reach, and has not referred to him by name since.
Senator Bourne is a useful man in the upper chamber. He is a nifty expounder, and has a quick-fire battery of long, intricate words. He divides honors with the Hood river apple as an advertiser of Oregon, people and thousands of Oregon people have benefited by his largesse in the form of free onion seeds and franked oranges which were not allowed to become too frank. On the fourth of March next, Senator Bourne will retire to a locality of the same name, from whence no traveler returns without the formality of a primary election.

Trials and Tribulations of Old Time Wagon Show.

By D. W. WATT

In the spring of 1879 while we were organizing the Burr Robbins show at Spring Brook headquarters we soon found as the saying goes that we were "up against it" for help. The usual amount of drivers and canvassmen for the show who had generally commented to show up early in the season were not on hand. The ring performers, the side show and all the privileges were provided for, but the workmen didn't seem to come in the usual way.

Tom Gray, the boss canvassman, was far short of help and was hiring any one that came along that was able to do any kind of a day's work, and Delevan the boss hostler was in the same fix. Among the ones who applied for work to Delevan was a short, fleshy young man who was always known around the show as Fatty. He was hired to drive a team over the road and care for the same, and it did not take Delevan long to find out that that was his limit and then some. Fatty came to Janesville from somewhere in the west to attend the telegraph school, probably sent there for the reason that there was nothing at home that they could teach him to do. Of course he could not read, write, graphy and had to do something, so he hired out to the show as a driver.

That year I had to organize a parade, and take it out, and it was my business to see that everything was in ship shape before they took it off the lot. All the drivers had to wear uniforms in the parade and it seemed to be impossible for Fatty to put on his uniform, button it up straight and knock the dents out of his hat. And it was my business after the parade was on the street to drive down the line and see of everything looked all right and I would invariably find Fatty with the top button and the lower button hole buttoned together and a dent in the side of his hat, and I always had to look him over before I started the parade.
The day we were to show in Brodhead, Wis. we got in late and everything was hushed to get the tents up and the parade out on time. This day I took the parade off the lot and was just heading into the main street with it when I happened to think that I had not looked Fatty over. I stopped the parade and drove back. I saw there sat Fatty on the cage with his usual misfit. I said a few things to Fatty that wouldn't look well to print and finally asked him if he didn't know enough to put his uniform on button up the coat straight, knock the dents out of his hat and sit up as though he was alive. And he said, "No, sir, I don't. If I did I would not be working here day and night for $12 a month." And I think this was the only bright idea that ever entered Fatty's head during the season, so I said to him, "All right, Fatty, I will either let you go or I will be there very day to look after you."

Fatty finished the season and was paid off on the farm at Spring Brook, and as he was getting his money, I said to him, "What are you going to do, and where are you going to go." He said to me, "The going thing I am going to do is to go to bed. I haven't had a night's sleep since the show started last spring," and he said, "If I wake up in time to start out again in the spring I'll be satisfied." I said to him, "You will have to take your chances on that for I don't think anybody'll bother themselves to call you."

I never saw Fatty after that and for all I know he may be sleeping yet. This same season while we were touring in the northern part of this state we showed in Augusta and from there were to go to Eau Claire, a distance I think of something like 20 miles. Just after the afternoon show had commenced the best imitation that I ever saw of Joshua Wirtcome drove up in front of the show with a beautiful bay horse and a farm horse and a good chunk of a farm horse hitched with him to a lumber wagon. The old farmer paid no attention to anything around there except the side show wagons. He had a boy at his side 16 or 17 years old whom you could tell at a glance was his son. White one of the team was as fine a horse as I ever looked at they didn't seem to know or think that he was anything out of the ordinary. Delevan, the boss hostler, who always had his eye out for a good horse was not long in getting to him and asking what such a horse was worth. The farmer said he didn't care to sell him but he thought he was probably worth as much as anybody's horse. Delevan started right in to make a trade with him, told him that he had a nice mare that would be worth as much or more to him on the farm than this horse would, and he would give him a good trade. "Well," he said, "You would have to give me a good horse and the price of another one to get this fellow." In a few moments Burr Robbins was out looking him over and told Delevan not to let him get away if he could get him at a reasonable price. And Delevan soon had the farmer back in the horse tent showing him this mare and to make a long story short he soon made a deal, Delevan gave him the sorrel mare and $75 in money for his coach horse.

This mare was balky and as the saying goes would at times "kick the stars out of the heavens." The coach horse was taken far back in the horse tents and Delevan with three or four of his assistants brought the mare out and hitched her to the lumber wagon with the other horse. The farmer and his boy got into the wagon and tried to start her. She went into the air and came down and kicked and made all kinds of trouble, but this never seemed to bother the farmer. He said she would probably be all right when he got her away from the show where it was quiet and that he had seen many of that kind of horses and he presumed she was a little nervous. After several efforts the two horses started together and down the road they went on a run and when the farmer had gone a few rods he turned and hollered good day to Delevan, and said, "Good Luck to you."

Mr. Robbins said to Delevan, "Now you must not work this horse over the road on any of the heavy wagons." Delevan said, "I will drive him over the road on my light buckboard and take the finest care of him and if Johnnie Griffiths or Jim Vanetta get this horse when we get home they will have to put up six or seven hundred dollars for her."
The roads were all sandy from Augusta to Eau Claire so we had what we called a pack-up breakfast and started together and down the road Claire, I had to wait until everything was all right and then I could settle the bills and then drive ahead and be in town ahead of the balance of the show. I was within about five miles of Eau Claire just as it was getting daylight in the morning and I overtook Delevan, and the poor horse was standing on three hoots, holding up the right fore foot and the hoof had dropped off. He had been nerved and as a rule when this is done it is only a matter of time until the entire hoof will come off. Delevan waited until Burr Robbins came along. He had a 44 caliber revolver in his pocket and he led the poor horse down into the gulch at the side of the road in the pine woods and shot him. After that it was worth anybody's life to say anything about the horse trade that was made in Augusta with Cy Perkins. Delevan was a high class horse trader and it was only such invisible fanits as this one that he ever over-looked. I was taking tickets at the front door and was looking out for the show when the trade was being made and after the farmer had come Mr. Robbins knew that I liked a good horse and had Delevan send a man to the horse tent and get the horse and lead him up and get the horse out of the main entrance of the show so that I could take a look at him. He was certainly a fine looking one and it was the last time that he was ever put on exhibition.
But these are simply rough and smooth places over which we had to travel with the wagon show and I thought it might interest you.

BIG LIVE STOCK SHOW
OPENED AT CHICAGO

More Than Eleven Thousand Entries in Various Classes—Prizes Aggregate over $75,000.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Chicago, Nov. 30.—The thirteenth annual international live stock show at the Union Stock Yards opened today with the unprecedented record of more than 11,000 entries in the various classes and a list of prizes aggregating more than $75,000. The show will continue until next Saturday and, judging from present indications, will be one of the most successful ever held in this city.

The majority of the states of the Union, several provinces of the Dominion of Canada, half a dozen states of Mexico and a number of European countries are represented in various classes. Particularly interesting is the display of imported Belgian horses imported for this occasion by the Belgian Horse Society.

One of the valuable educational features of the show is the students' judging contest which will open Monday and in which students from more than fifteen agricultural colleges in the United States and Canada will compete for twenty agricultural college scholarships donated by J. Ogden Armour and representing a money value of more than $10,000.

ACHING DOLLARS.

This is a common, everyday story. But uncommon.

It is said there is no other person so "close" in money matters as the average retired farmer.

Emerson has said the farmer's dollar is the hardest earned dollar in the world because it is made, entirely of backaches without alloy. Which may be a good reason why the retired farmer is not so easily priced loose from his dollar. It costs him backaches.

The story?

About a year ago J. E. Howe, a well to do retired farmer of Plant, Mich., sold at his public sale, when he gave up the farm, a team of sleek old work horses that he had brought up from colts.

Howe had an affection for the faithful beasts and he wanted the team to fall into good hands. The horses had seen their best days and brought only $100 at the sale.

But he required the purchaser to make a written agreement compelling the owner to take good care of the old horses. They were to be kept in as good condition as when sold and—

In the event the agreement was not kept Howe reserved the right to buy the old team back for $100.

Several months passed, and one day Mr. Howe learned that the purchaser had violated his agreement. The horses had been overworked, they were getting poor and gaunt and had sores on their shoulders where ill fitting collars had chafed them.

Howe demanded the team.

He offered the $100 for them, but the man refused to keep his agreement. He said he needed the team and would work the horses until they dropped if he so desired.

Mr. Howe was compelled to go into court to get the old team back. And when he got possession the poor old animals, scarcely were able to walk. He took the team home, where by good care and kind attention he hoped to save the lives of the horses.

It was too late. And as lingering meat only pain and distress for the poor creatures, he paid a man $5 to shoot the animals and bury them.

Is it not an uncommon tale?

One hundred of Mr. Howe's backache dollars went to save his old team from further ache of toil and suffering. Could aching dollars better go?

It is written that the merciful man is merciful to his beast but seldom will a man spend $100 for a sentiment.

SCOTSMEN OBSERVE
ST. ANDREW'S DAY

Wear Customary Sprig of Heather in Honor of Occasion—The Legends of the Patron Saint.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 30.—This is St. Andrew's Day, and in honor of the occasion Scotsmen all over the world are proudly wearing a wee sprig o' heather, fresh from the misty, purple hills of their native land. Chicago boasts of a large number of citizens from the land o' cakes by brae and from the land o' cakes by brae and St. Andrew's Society of this city is invariably one of the notable social functions of the early winter.

Just how St. Andrew came to be chosen as the Patron Saint of Scotland is lost in the mists of antiquity, but from time immemorial her royal banner was the silver X-shaped cross of St. Andrew upon a blue ground. St. Andrew, of the twelve disciples, is reputed to have been crucified on an X-shaped cross, at Petras, on November 30, A. D. 70, after a life spent in preaching the gospel and in relieving the distressed. To the true Scotsman, therefore, the St. Andrew's Cross is at once emblematic of love for their native land and of fidelity to the strong religious faith which has ever characterized the Scottish people.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat
BY RUTH CAMERON

ONE SECRET OF HAPPINESS.

"AND now let's see what's in the next window. Oh, I DO love to look at pretty things."

I was standing in front of a shop window in which a riot of exquisitely tinted scarfs, delectable fabrics, magnificently fragile laces and voluptuous furs was displayed, when I heard the above remark. It was uttered in a voice so thoroughly happy and full of pleasure that I instinctively turned to look at the speaker.

I saw a middle-aged woman with a sweet, refined face and very shabby clothes. Her hat I reckoned to have been made in 1910 and re-trimmed in 1911. Her gray suit dated back to the days of pleated skirts and three-quarter coats. Her gloves were much worn, and she had absolutely none of the accessories in the way of furs and laces and scarfs at which she was gazing.

And yet her voice was so full of pleasure that it had attracted my attention, and her face was ecstatic as her voice.

Lucky woman! What if she HAS none of the lovely things which it is plain she appreciates so fully. She has something infinitely more valuable; she possesses one of the most potent of all the keys to happiness—the ability to enjoy beauty without possessing it.

The world is full of beautiful things; to look at beauty is one of the most natural and most healthy sources of happiness. And yet there are a great many people so built that they cannot really enjoy anything however beautiful unless it belongs to them.

The desire for possession is one of the most deep-rooted and enduring of human passions. From the baby who reaches out his hand for the bright object that attracts him and cries when he cannot have it, to the old man who schemes by an ingenious will to keep his hold on his possessions even beyond the grave, we are all more or less its slaves.

It takes a philosopher to break the chains and to realize that true content does not necessarily lie in possession. And this woman was evidently a philosopher. Think of all the infinite riches that are hers. Wealthy people are often discontented because even their wealth has a limit. Hers has none; all that she sees is hers to enjoy because she can enjoy it without possessing.

"It makes me perfectly miserable to have to be with Rosamond," a rather plain girl said to me once, "because she is so beautiful and I am unhappy because I never can look like that."

You see she was an abject slave of the desire for possession. How much happier is the state of mind of another woman who says, "I think I enjoy a beautiful woman as much as a man does. You see I love beauty for itself and whether I find it in a man or a woman, a ship or a sky or a flower, I take pleasure in it."

Lucky the man or woman who can teach himself or herself to enjoy beauty without forever coveting it, for the world is full of beauty and hence full of happiness for such a one.

HEART and HOME PROBLEMS
BY MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson—I am a boy of 14. Am I too young to walk home from school with girls? (2) Would it be wrong for me to take a girl schoolmate to a show or party?

SCHOOLBOY.

(1) No—as long as you don't try to be mischievous. Every boy ought to have nice girl friends, but he should wait until he is a man before he tries to make love or "keep company."

(2) Yes; if it is in the daytime.

Dear Mrs. Thompson—Kindly advise me what I can trim a little white serge coat with, to match a navy blue silk bonnet, for a little girl five years old. SUBSCRIBER.

Plaid is much used for trimming this season. You might get a plaid, in cloth or silk containing a blue to match the bonnet. Leaving the coat all white would be very pretty, using a wide silk white braid to trim it.

Dear Mrs. Thompson—(1) Can you tell me how to make the hair wavy or curly? I admire curly hair very much and mine is so straight. (2) Is it proper for a girl to call a young man over the phone or invite him to see her, when she thinks he is either slow or bashful?

(1) Nothing will make straight hair permanently curly.

(2) A good many girls are apt to think a man is slow or bashful when in reality he doesn't care to get better acquainted with them. If a man doesn't avail himself of a casual invitation to call, let him go—he doesn't want to.

Dear Mrs. Thompson—Do cucumbers cream or cold cream promote the growth of superfluous hair? Are these skin foods good for the skin? I have always been afraid to use creams or anything other than a cup boiling apricot juice. When clear add two teaspoons butter and juice of one-half lemon.

Sandwiches.

For Sunday Supper or Small Tea—One-fourth pound boiled ham, one-half dozen sweet pickles, one small bottle stuffed olives, one-half cup English walnut kernels.

Put all the above meat chopper and add mayonnaise dressing.

Things Worth Knowing.

To clean nickel on stove, pour a little ammonia on flannel rag, rub quickly, then polish off with soft cloth. I find nothing equals ammonia for cleaning nickel.

If you break a piece out of a lamp chimney or lantern globe, dip a piece of strong cloth (gingham or unbleached muslin) in milk, put over hole while chimney is hot and it will stick and never come off unless soaked in water.

The contents of a saucepan should never cook (unless recipe expressly states to the contrary) without a cover. Not only is the steaming usually beneficial, but when that steam is allowed to fill the kitchen it harms walls and furniture. Moreover, it imparts the cooking smell more or less to the whole house, often called "the boarding house odor."

The KITCHEN CABINET

GOODS of various kinds allure taste.

There's a deal of spending in a six-pence.

ECONOMY IN BUYING.

There are some ideas which it seems hard to separate ourselves from in regard to meat values. Meat that has been used for soup has lost its flavor, but the food value is there and the meat may be converted into a palatable dish with the addition of some flavoring. A frugal housewife may have two good meals for a family of four or five from a three-pound knuckle of veal. Cover the meat with cold water and cook until the meat is tender, but not long enough to make it tasteless.

Remove the meat and add two table-spoonsful of farina to the stock, flavor with a little mace, and two cups of milk or cream and serve hot.

For the next day's meal remove the meat from the bone and cut in small pieces. Fry a small onion in a little fat, remove the onion and fry the meat. Cover with water and cook for ten minutes, flavor with two table-spoonsful of curry powder, thicken the gravy with flour and add a table-spoonful of vinegar. Serve with a border of rice.

The pieces of rare broiled steak left from dinner make a most delicious dish when combined with a few vegetables. Put a layer of sliced potatoes in the bottom of a buttered casserole, add a generous layer of the cold meat, a sprinkling of grated onion and then a large cup of tomato. Season and bake well covered for at least an hour. Just before serving scatter a table-spoonful or two of cooked peas over the top.

A casserole or heavy stone dish with a tight cover is invaluable in cooking cheap cuts of meat, as the long, slow cooking develops the flavor and makes otherwise unpalatable meat very tender.

Another valuable reminder to the housewife who wants to keep her meat bills down is that a variety of flavorings which change the character of a dish make it more digestible and more attractive. Monotony is the bane of the menu maker.

A powdered ginger snap added to a gravy is a change which is very acceptable for the every day browned fowl.

A teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce or a few drops of tabasco or catsup, a pinch of mace and a dash of celery salt, a bit of garlic and a mixture of herbs will always be found of service in a dish.

DIGESTIVE ILLS OFTEN DUE TO MENTAL CONDITION.

Emphasizing the importance of the mental factor in digestion, Dr. Leon Patrick says, in Diet and Health: "While it is true that over-eating, irregular eating, and eating incompatible things which should never be taken into the stomach, cause chemical changes in the digestive tract which generate poisons, yet many of the digestive and eliminative derangements can be traced to mental causes. The digestive processes follow the mental, coincide with them." This agrees with the suggestions in a recent hint about the importance of the mental attitude in cases of obesity and leanness and the influence of the mental state on nutrition in general. The maintenance of right mental attitude can not obviate the injurious effects of wrong eating, but neither is it wise to disregard the mental factor in health and disease.

The Every-Day Heroes About Us

HE was a motorman on the Belt Line at Niagara, and as the car sped around sharp curves almost at the edge of the foaming river, the lone passenger on the front seat said, "This must be rather dangerous in winter when the rails are slippery."

"Oh, this isn't anything," he said, giving the handle a twist to put on more power. "I worked on the railroad before I took this job." He stepped to the side, and let the car whiz on by itself, while he spat out a large juicy mouthful of tobacco.

"I suppose there is more danger on the railroad," suggested the lone passenger hopefully.

"Yes. Some pretty tough jobs are put up to us. You see that bridge over there?" he asked, pointing to the steel structure that arched the river a hundred or so feet above.

The passenger nodded.

"One night about eleven o'clock, I was sent out there to examine the rails. It was bitter cold and the boss was afraid the frost would contract the rails and cause an accident. I crawled out underneath, in among that framework, d'you see? and made the examination."

The passenger looked up and shivered. She thought of the bitterly cold, dark night, of the raging, implacable torrent below, of the fatal result of one misstep in that complicated maze of seemingly cobwebby strands of wire, and suddenly a wave of admiration and respect for this grizzled, weather-beaten, apparently commonplace man swept over her. She thought of the passengers riding in comfort in the train soon to cross that bridge, and of how much depended upon this man, this man who looked so ordinary, and who, nine out of ten men meeting him on the street, would consider beneath them. Yet he had deliberately and without hesitation taken his life in his hands on that cold, dark night that those whom he didn't know, and would never even see, might be sure of safety.

There are many of these everyday heroes all about us, men in greasy and patched working clothes, who live poorly in squalid little streets, and whom we never give a thought to. Or if we do notice them, it is indifferently and as inferior to ourselves. Yet they may have done far more praiseworthy things than we ever could or would do, done them quite simply merely as part of their duty.

The lone passenger wondered that if among the men she knew there were any who would have climbed out on that bridge that dark, cold night to see if the rails were split. To do a commonplace, though deadly perilous thing like that, is different from acting the hero with hands playing and flags flying and the world looking on. And all about us in very ordinary clothes, are walking these every day heroes who have contributed, unknown and unappreciated by us, to our happiness and joy in life. Are they not worthy of our honor?

There is a principle in cooking vegetables that must be established before entering into the minor details of seasoning. It is that vegetables must be boiled in as little water as possible. In most cases the best and most nutritious part of the vegetable is turned into the sink.

A general rule to follow is: First—All fresh vegetables should be cooked in boiling water or steam. Few cooks and housekeepers really know what boiling water is.

Second—Cook fresh vegetables in sufficient water (boiling) to moisten and add boiling water to them while cooking as required.

Third—Dried vegetables should be soaked in cold water for twelve hours, then started cooking in a little cold water and boiling water added as needed. Cook slowly for three hours at least.

Fourth—Most vegetables are better cooked in boiling salted water. Stock is also frequently used for special dishes.

Fifth—The vegetables are drained from the little remaining water when done. A lump of butter is put into the frying pan and when melted the vegetables are thrown into the pan, tossed and turned with a wooden spoon, sprinkled with pepper, a little chopped parsley and served in a hot dish.

French beans, carrots, turnips, celery, peas, white beans, lentils, and cabbage are all treated in this way, i. e., cooked in SMALL QUANTITIES of boiling water, drained and tossed in butter or bits of bacon, salt and pepper. Good, sweet butter must be used for seasoning if used at all. Cream may be added when desired.

Seasonable Fruits and Vegetables.

Vegetables—Cabbage (white and red), beets, dried beans, carrots, cauliflower, celery, egg plant, let-

DINNER STORIES

"Mother, turn the hose on me," said little Willie as his mamma was dressing him in the morning.

"Why, Willie, what in the world do you mean?" cried his alarmed and loving parent.

"Why, you've put my stockings on the wrong side out."

A bright spirit of earlier days, Charley McKeand, an advocate ready for any emergency, dropped into court too late one day to read the depositions, and found himself faced with the duty of defending a woman for stealing a pair of boots. He burst into a moving harangue, and said he would read the very words of her defense on arrest, since they bore "the stamp of conscious innocence."

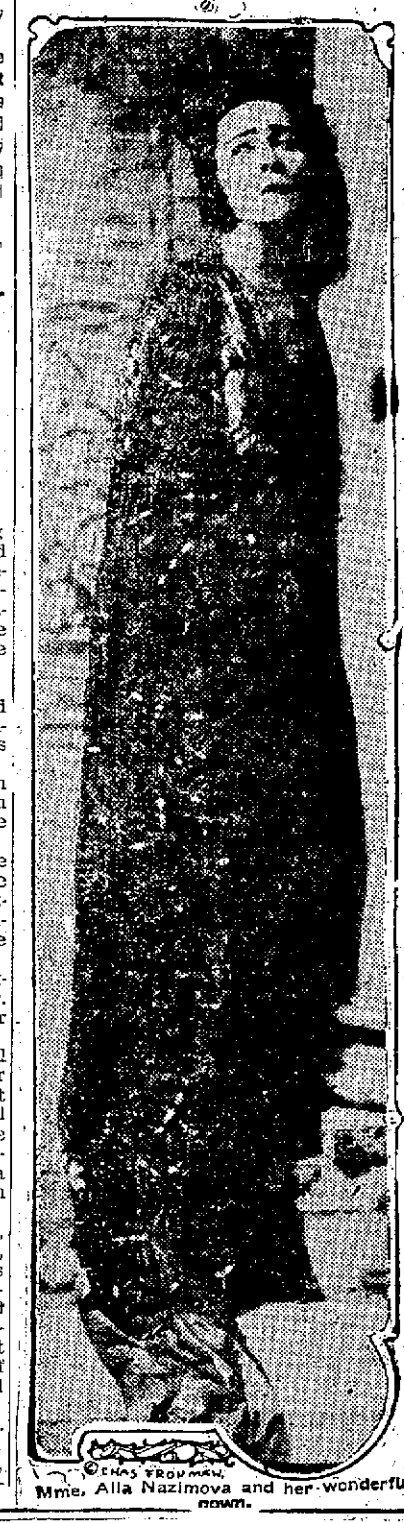

He seized the depositions, and went on: "Hail here we are. Oh, h'm!" He faltered a little when he saw tuna, leeks, onions, parsnips, parsley, peppers, potatoes (Irish and sweet), squash, turnips (white and yellow), salsify.

Fruits—Apples, cranberries, nuts, grapes, grapefruit, lemons, chestnuts, coconuts, hickory-nuts.

Extras—Artichokes, wax and string beans, brussels sprouts, cucumbers, endive, mushrooms, radishes, tomatoes, melons, oranges, pineapples.

Try This Home-Made Cough Remedy

Costs Little, But Does the Work Quickly, or Money Refunded.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with 1/2 pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint-bottle; then add the Sugar Syrup. Shake a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

You will find that this simple remedy takes hold of a cough more quickly than anything else you ever used. Usually ends a deep-seated cough inside of 24 hours. Splendid, too, for whooping cough, croup, chest pains, bronchitis and other throat troubles. It stimulates the appetite and is slightly laxative, which helps end a cough.

This recipe makes more and better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for $2.50. It keeps perfectly and tastes pleasantly.

Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in quaiacol and all the natural pine elements which are so healing to the mucous membranes. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

This plan of making cough syrup with Pinex and sugar syrup (or strained honey) has proven so popular throughout the United States and Canada that it is often imitated. But the old, successful formula has never been equalled.

A quantity of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Homemade Syrup—Now is the time when everyone is using syrup, and maple syrup is very expensive, so I make my own. One 10-cent can corn syrup, one pint pure maple syrup, one pound granulated sugar, one pint water. Boil sugar and water to a boil and add other syrup, let come to a boil and bottle. Makes almost three quarts syrup and costs about 12 cents a quart. Maple syrup is 35 cents a quart.

This looks and tastes the same and is pure.

Ginger Cookies—Two cups New Orleans molasses, one cup granulated sugar, one cup lard melted after measured, one cup buttermilk, three small teaspoons soda, one-half teaspoon salt, one tablespoon ginger. Stir as thick as possible at night, roll out in morning (or any other time) and bake in quick oven.

Sweet potato Pie—Our family is very fond of this pie. Perhaps some of the sisters would like to try it. To two cups hot sweet potatoes boiled and mashed add half cup sugar and two well-beaten eggs, two table-spoons butter, grated rind and juice of one lemon, two cups milk. Beat until light and flaky. Bake with under crust only, until firm.

To Cook Veal—Take round slice of veal of medium thickness, flour well on both sides, put in spider with plenty of butter, brown on both sides. Cover with hot water, put cover on spider and simmer until nearly cooked. Season with salt and pepper. The flour and water make a nice gravy and should be poured over meat when ready to serve.

Steamed Fig Pudding—Quarter pound figs chopped fine, quarter pound beef suet chopped fine, two cups bread crumbs, two table-spoons flour, one cup brown sugar, two eggs, one-half grated nutmeg. To chopped figs add suet, bread crumbs and flour, then brown sugar, then well beaten eggs (if too dry add one table-spoon milk), then nutmeg. Stir altogether thoroughly and quickly, pour in bowl covered with greased wax paper and steam three hours. This pudding is a fine substitute for plum pudding. Serve with a lemon sauce.

Lemon Sauce: Pour cupful boiling water over one cup granulated sugar, boil 15 minutes, then add one teaspoon butter and half teaspoon essence of lemon.

Pudding Sauce (just a little different and fine for our holiday puddings)—Mix thoroughly one-half cup sugar, one table-spoon flour; sift it into one

SUFFERED TORMENT WITH ECZEMA

For Many Years, On Thigh. Also on Scalp. Awful Itching Skin. Could Not Sleep. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Completely Cured.

Lebanon, O.—My eczema started on my thigh with small blisters. It also came on my scalp. It began to itch and I began to scratch. For eighteen months I could not tell what I passed through with that awful itching. I would scratch until the blood would soak through my underwear, and I could not talk to my friends on the street but I would be digging and punching the spot, until I was very much ashamed. The itching was so intense I could not sleep after once in bed and warm. I certainly suffered torment with that eczema for many years. "I chased after everything I ever heard of; all to no avail. I saw the advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a sample. Imagine my delight when I applied the first dose to that awful itching on my leg and scalp, in less than a minute the itching on both places ceased. I got some more Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After the second day I never had another itching spell, and Cuticura Soap and Ointment completely cured me. I was troubled with awful dandruff all over my scalp. The Cuticura Soap has cured that trouble." (Signed) L. R. Pink, Jan. 22, 1912. Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are sold throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address: "Cuticura," Dept. 7, Boston. "Under-faced" men should use Cuticura Soap Shaving Stick, 25c. Sample free.

SEATTLE PLAYGROUND FACILITIES LIBERAL

Has Twenty-Two Sites, Twelve of Which are Equipped—Field and Recreation Houses Built.

The playground feature of park development in Seattle, which, previous to 1909, had not been given particular attention, has shown remarkable progress since that time, with the result that Seattle now has more playgrounds and more outdoor recreation facilities than any city west of Chicago, regardless of size. Twenty-two sites, now owned by the city, comprise a total area of 102 acres, and have been acquired at a cost to the city of $506,760.31. One additional site covering fifteen acres is now under condemnation.

Twelve of the playgrounds are equipped with steel gymnasium and other play apparatus, including ball fields, tennis courts, swings, teeters, wading pools, sand courts, etc., and are supervised during the summer months by both men and women supervisors. Six playfields are partially improved and in use as athletic fields, with no supervision or equipment, and four are at the present time unimproved. Field houses or recreation buildings, used as social centers, and indoor gymnasiums have been constructed on four of the larger grounds. The total cost of playground investment, with land, and improvements, has cost the city $729,070.90. During the year 1911 alone, approximately $87,000 was expended by the board of park commissioners for playfield maintenance and improvement.

The Lincoln, Collins, Rogers, Miller, Hiawatha, Ballard, R. F. Day, Ross, University, Queen Anne, South Park and Beacon Hill playfields are equipped with the most modern recreation facilities. Steel gymnasium apparatus is provided separately for boys and girls, with all the various devices of aerial rings, ladders, climbing poles and swings, to delight the children, who are carefully watched and guided by competent instructors and supervisors. A record of the attendance at the supervised playgrounds during 1911 showed that 843,002 boys and girls availed themselves of the recreational facilities during the year.—Municipal Journal.

MILE OF CONCRETE ROAD BUILT IN DEKALB COUNTY.

One mile of concrete road has been built by the township. It is on the road between Sycamore and DeKalb. It cost approximately $7,000. Owing to a heavy storm damaging cement and sand and gravel, it made the road cost extra. It is the belief that the road could be built for $6,000 a mile.

The road committee of the DeKalb Commercial club took an active part in this work, and the result was that the road commissioners got the cement for seventy-four cents a barrel, an unheard-of cheap price. However, it was necessary to ship the gravel in from other places, and the gravel on cars in DeKalb cost $1.25 a yard.

The Commercial club interested the state, who sent engineers, overseers and machinery, and this resulted in another big saving. It is said that the Commercial club saved DeKalb township $2,000 in this work.

The committee was not stingy in the use of the cement and the mix was made one part cement to four and a half parts gravel, or better. The cement was poured and was laid six inches deep. Some parts of the work was re-reinforced with wire netting, and other parts with twisted iron. Expansion joints were made diagonally across the road, instead of at right angles. Cressote wood blocks filled the joints. It was claimed by making the expansion joints diagonally across the road, instead of at right angles, that the edges of the cement would not break and crumble.

The road is twelve feet wide. The drainage is perfect. However, a shoulder, two feet wide of stone is built on either side of the concrete road, this making a roadway sixteen feet wide.

The committee of the Commercial club, the road commissioners, as well as engineers for the cement company, were on the job all of the time. It is said that it was the best inspected piece of work in road building in Illinois. It is now proposed to watch the efforts of the frost this winter.

HEALTH OF CITIES NOT PROPORTIONAL TO SIZE.

Chicago Journal—Great cities are supposed to be health-destroyers, and in a way the supposition is correct. A great city requires the most careful precaution to keep it as healthy as the open country is by nature. But careful study of statistics shows that small cities may be quite as bad for the health as great ones.

Cities of the United States with a population 500,000 or more have an annual death rate of 19.3 per 10,000 inhabitants.

Cities with a population of 100,000 to 200,000 have a death rate of 16.8 per 10,000 inhabitants.

Cities with a population of 50,000 to 100,000 have a death rate of 19.1 per 10,000 inhabitants.

Cities of from 25,000 to 50,000 population have a death rate of 16.2 per 10,000 inhabitants.

The city which has just started to climb to the rank of a large city, has the highest death rate of all; worse even than New York with her swarming east side.

The probable explanation is that towns have to reach at least the 100,000 mark before they get the true city attitude toward health matters. Before that, they take things in a happy-go-lucky fashion. They pay little attention to clean food, clean water, prompt suppression of epidemics. They have passed the point where fresh air comes without trying, and neighborhood interest takes care of the sick; yet have not reached the point of making these things a matter of municipal concern. When great cities grow a little greater in the matter of thought for health, their size will cease to be a danger.

CITY OF DEKALB WILL HAVE "GREAT WHITE WAY."

The city of DeKalb has completed arrangements for the installation of a beautiful and practical system of boulevard lights. The money to defray the cost of installation has been raised and it is planned to do the work next spring.

Massive concrete standards will be used. The standards are regulation height, round and fluted and look like marble pedestals. The top will be mounted with only one light—the luminous arc, the latest thing in street lights. The arc will be enclosed in an immense globe, sixteen inches in diameter. It is claimed that these lights will illuminate for almost a block, and that it is possible to read ordinary printing for a distance of 200 feet.

DeKalb business men propose to have a great white way, seven blocks long, and when completed, DeKalb citizens expect other cities will send delegations to DeKalb to get ideas on ornamental street lighting.

DeKalb will install a total of seventy-two lights. The downtown business district will be "day light" at night. It is claimed that these lights will throw such a wonderful ray of light that DeKalb can be "picked" by the naked eye a distance of twenty miles at night.

RACINE MAY SOON ENACT ANTI-MASHING ORDINANCE.

(Racine Times.)

Racine is to have an anti-mashing ordinance, similar to the one now in force in Milwaukee. The ordinance, if enacted, will prohibit the use of the judiciary committee.

After hearing conditions as they are now on the streets explained by Mrs. C. C. Gittings and Miss Anna Peterson, the members of the committee announced themselves as unanimously in favor of the ordinance.

The two central association workers told of instances that had come under their own observation of the pernicious effects of "mashing" in Racine. They said by adopting an ordinance and doing away with the practice, protection would be furnished both for our young boys and girls. It would also prevent "soliciting," which is now in progress on the streets of Racine, according to Mayor Goodland.

ADOPT ANTI-ROLLER TOWEL ORDINANCE AT BIRMINGHAM.

Birmingham, Ala.—The roller towel, a dispenser of germs, and the bane of the traveling man's existence in many cases, is doomed in Birmingham. The commissioners have passed an ordinance introduced by Judge A. O. Lane making it a severe penalty to have roller towels in Birmingham. The ordinance was called for at the meeting of the commission and was heartily approved and adopted.

The ordinance will be advertised by Secretary Ryall and will go into effect soon thereafter. In the city of Birmingham the roller towel will be displaced by sanitary paper towels or individual napkins.

PLAYGROUNDS PUT AN END TO GANG SPIRIT OF BOYS.

At the meeting of the school board of the Union District this morning note was made of the fact that the "gang" spirit in the Central and Union schools is being rapidly broken up as a result of the installation of the playground apparatus. There is no more "gang" spirit, the boys have gone to the playgrounds and are now to get into the "gangs," fight with other "gangs," and making life miserable for their teachers, today the youngsters are too busily engaged in various sports to gather and discuss their supposed wrongs. The youngsters are also allowed the use of the apparatus until dark and frequently spent an hour or two after school instead of being down town on the streets. The school is made more attractive by the use of the apparatus and the pupils are thus interested in their work.—Sterling Gazette.

MUCH ASPHALT PAVEMENT PUT DOWN IN MILWAUKEE.

Three hundred thousand square yards of asphalt paving and 40,000 yards of patch work was accomplished this year by the nonpartisan city administration. The work is finished with the exception of trimming a few streets already paved. Commissioner Simmons of the board of public works estimates that 50 per cent more asphalt was spread over the streets of Milwaukee this year than last.

Next year attention will be given macadam streets. Commissioner Simmons pronounces many of these in bad shape, but because of the indifference repair work done by the Socialists upon asphalt, it was necessary, he said, to repair these thoroughfares first. It is the plan of the administration to purchase three or four macadam repair outfits and to keep them moving all summer.—Evening Wisconsin.

EAU CLAIRE SAVES MONEY BY BREAKFASTING TRAMPS.

An item in the report of Chief of Police Elliott for October, as of special interest. It reads: "Comparative cost under old system, $174.22. Under new system, $2.95. This is in the handling of the 'nobodies' or tramps. At present there are no commitments to the county jail, no costs and all that. The tramps are given a night's lodging in the city lockup and a 10-cent breakfast and are sent out of town.—Eau Claire Leader.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

To the Gazette: Greetings. It was my privilege and pleasure last Sunday to listen to, and speak with the Rev. Jenkins L. Jones, in his tabernacle of the Abraham Lincoln Center Library building of Chicago, of which he is the pastor, builder and owner. This worthy man will be well remembered by many of Janesville's best old timers.

It was August the second, 1911, that he delivered the funeral oration of one of the Bower City's oldest and most highly respected citizens, Henry Crane. The gentle, kind, and most highly respected man, said "remember me to my Janesville friends, tell them that I love them still, and am still trying to carry on the work which I started in their midst over thirty years ago."

My time being so limited, take this means, through the courtesy of the Gazette of delivering this good man's message. With best wishes to all. IRVING INMAN.

For a small sum of money you can advertise that house for sale, and get a buyer through a want ad.

ORFORDVILLE

Orfordville, Nov. 30.—Mr. and Mrs. Earl Harrop are spending the Thanksgiving recess at Whitewater. Miss Bertina Peterson is home for a few days from Albion Academy.

Miss Gena Stuvengen spent Thanksgiving with Miss Mason at her home near Whitewater.

Albert Behling and family of Footville were in town Wednesday. The children of the intermediate and primary rooms of the village school, under the guidance of their teachers, Misses Mason and Carney, gave an extremely pleasing program Wednesday afternoon. Their audience consisted of parents and other interested grown-ups, and the youngsters "did themselves proud." The teachers deserve much credit.

The older pupils in Prof. Harrop's room gave no entertainment this time, as they are preparing for a play to be given at Christmas.

Mr. and Mrs. Orrin Rime spent Thanksgiving with Mrs. Rime's parents at Edgerton.

Thursday, at the Odd Fellows' hall, a number of friends gave a supper party as a sort of farewell to Mr. and Will Liston, who expect to remove from Orfordville early in December.

Mrs. J. S. Helgeson, while still in the care of a trained nurse, is slowly improving.

Mr. and Mrs. George Crum plan to start for Panama next week on a combined business and pleasure trip.

Ernest Swigart is nursing three wounded fingers, which were pinched by a falling tree.

Miss Alma Olson of Beloit, is visiting Miss Rosey Rime.

John Olmstead, son of Peter Olmstead, and Hannah Logan, daughter of Knute Logan, were married Thanksgiving morning at the Lutheran church, by Rev. O. Kvale. The couple will be nicely situated in the Winslow cottage at the southern part of the village.

Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Sater and Mr. and Mrs. Sever Anderson spent Thanksgiving in Madison.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Reader were given of friends in Broadhead on Thursday.

One thing up on which Orfordville may congratulate itself is that there are no destitute families within its borders. The good people of the village never wait for any certain time of year to bring help to any needy. There is usually sufficient employment for all, and in necessary cases money is forthcoming. The purpose of the Good Fellow movement, projected in neighboring towns, following the Chicago Tribune plan, is to bring Christmas cheer in a material sense to needy ones. This movement would be difficult to inaugurate in a village like ours, lacking, as it does, the absolute want which must prevail to make the Good Fellow idea appropriate.

AFTON

Afton, Nov. 30.—Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Robb entertained the Rev. R. W. Bosworth and Miss Bosworth at dinner last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Stark had as their guests at Thanksgiving dinner: Mr. and Mrs. Lidke of Clinton, Mr. and Mrs. Paultz and son of Janesville, Mr. and Mrs. Engelke, and Mr. and Mrs. John Brinkman, Mrs. Lidke and Mrs. Paultz are sisters of Mrs. Stark.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Uehling left Wednesday to spend Thanksgiving with their sons Albert and family at Lowell, Wis. From there they will go to Richmond, Wis. to visit Mr. Uehling's aged mother, returning home Monday.

Miss Bates and Miss Parmeley, the teachers at Afton, will spend the Thanksgiving recess at their homes.

Mrs. Fred Waggoner of Beloit, spent Monday at the home of her aunt, Mrs. C. E. Uehling.

The Royal Neighbors dance on Thursday night, was a very pleasant affair, fifty-three couples being in attendance, all enjoying a good time. A nice little sum was netted them. Smiley's orchestra of Beloit, furnished the music and Mrs. Nellie McCrea served the supper.

The December meeting of Social Rock Camp will be held at the home of the Recorder, Miss Ella Uehling, Thursday, Dec. 5th at 1:30 sharp. Royal Neighbors please notice change of time. As this is an important meeting, election of officers and it is hoped that all members will be present.

TOWN LINE

Town Line, Beloit and Rock, Nov. 30.—Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Powers spent 6 days in Janesville last week.

Mrs. Ira Lanabee was called to Milwaukee last Saturday because of the serious illness of the ten months' old child of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Gibbons.

Miss Jennie Clark of Beloit, returned to her home Monday, after a few days visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. McCarthy.

Mrs. Knute Storle was called to Eau Claire, Wednesday to attend the funeral of her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Henry Olson, who died Saturday night, after a long illness with tuberculosis. Besides her husband, Mrs. Olsen leaves three small children.

Alta and Alice Haertel of Harvard, spent Thanksgiving with their grandmother, Mrs. Henry Elfen Dahl.

Miss Ada Machlin returned home Monday, after a week's visit with relatives at Milton.

Henry Bartling, Sr., Miss Minnie Bartling and Dorothy Snyder, spent Thanksgiving at the home of Fred Bartling at Orfordville.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Powers, daughter, Alma, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Powers and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Miller spent Thursday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Powers' daughter, Mrs. Will Carls and family of Rockford.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Gesley very pleasantly entertained the following relatives at Thanksgiving dinner, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Gravedale and children, town of Newark; Mrs. Carrie Gesley, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Brédson and daughter, Dorothy, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Sprungen and daughter, Alice, Miss Lena Sprungen of Beloit; Miss Lydia Krostu, Cambridge, Wis., Benjamin Jansen of Hanover.

Miss Margaret Finley is spending a few days with her sister, Mrs. Fred Nessler.

Mr. and Mrs. Lou Cole and daughter, Lotus, and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Stone of Beloit, and Roy Cole of Evansville, spent Thanksgiving with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Cole town of Beloit.

M. J. Plumb, who is employed at Gary, Ind., spent Thanksgiving at home, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Plumb of Beloit, also spent Thursday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Plumb.

The Misses Bee and Eliza McCarthy left last Monday for a stay of some length at Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. L. J. McCrea, son, Leonard and daughter, Hylah left on Thursday morning to spend a couple of days with Mrs. McCrea's sister, Mrs. Clyde Gates and family of Hebron, Ill.

There was a family gathering of the Eldridge family at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gates Thursday.

Mrs. Emily Rasey of Beloit, spent Thanksgiving at the home of Mr. and Mrs. David Throne.

Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Walters entertained Mrs. Walters' parents and brother, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Lee and Will Lee of Beloit, Thursday.

HIS RISE TO POWER

By HENRY RUSSELL MILLER.

Author of "The Man Higher Up"

Copyright, 1911, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

"He is. He proved it today." I gave him the chance to make some money. more than he is likely to make in five years, and he turned it down—for sentimental reasons! And the worse of it is he didn't turn it down regretfully, but blunty, quite as though it didn't matter. That sort of man won't go far."

"He told me once that he didn't care much for money. I thought then he wasn't posing."

"And," Hampden continued the indictment, "he virtually called me a crook."

"Well?"

"Well—what?"

"Are you?" And she added quickly, seeing his look of aggrieved astonishment. "But of course I know you aren't."

"I am not," he said emphatically. "I have always kept my operations strictly within the law, and that is more than a good many men who aren't called crooks can say. Of course," he went on, "I know perfectly well I'll not be consulted when you come to marry. You will choose your husband according to your own tastes."

"I have the right," she interrupted, "since I shall have to live with him."

"Unless I have to support him!"

"You wouldn't have to," she said positively, "even if he were poor. I can do without luxury."

"You think you can," he answered. "You've never had to try. But even if you could do without it, you couldn't be content with mediocrity. You'd want to be in the thick of things, with a husband who'd wear a No. 8 hat, would have big wants and would put up a big fight to get what he wanted. And if you ever took the bit in your mouth, Lord pity you and your husband!"

"Do you know," she said thoughtfully, "I've been thinking just that. Still, John Dunneade—we're still discussing him, aren't we?—isn't exactly commonplace. He really has brains and he is attractive. In politics?"

"He would be out of place. You know nothing of politics. He'd have less chance there than in business."

"We are really anticipating the event. He hasn't asked me to marry him, and he doesn't intend to. I think he strongly disapproves of me, even while he likes me."

CHAPTER V. Explorations.

BEFORE the real leaders in the warfare against privilege, cool headed, farseeing, combining caution and courage, came forward to give form and direction to the uprising certain lonely protestants had appeared—young men mostly, audacious egotists who, the people said, thought they were wiser and better than other men, dared to criticize what their neighbors accepted and presumed to instruct their elders. In the end they were broken, silenced—sadly unaware that in the subconscious memory of men the echo of their protest was still ringing. They are forgotten now.

John Dunneade was a normally intelligent young man, healthy of mind and conscience, who had never been tempted, hence never tested. He had heard the protestants of his day, of course, but they dealt with problems so remote from his own simple existence that he had carelessly accepted his elders' appraisal of them. He had an ingenuous belief in the greatness and goodness of men who attained high position in life, such men as Senator Murchell.

Despite his charity and credulity, he was, when occasion presented itself, quick to see the fundamental verities of the case—as Stephen Hampden had learned.

He was not unambitious, although the spark had smoldered until, apparently from nowhere in particular, had come the suggestion of his nomination. When he perceived the distinct approval with which his neighbors received the suggestion his heart leaped within him. They were a good, kind people if he should prove a faithful servant in little perhaps—with unaffected modesty he contemplated the prospect—to him might be committed service of wider scope.

The conceded fact that his nomination came solely by grace of Murchell's and Sheehan's decree caused him vague misgivings. Jeremy Applegate's plaint startled him. Hampden's offer did not tempt—it revolted him. What troubled him most was that these things were done in the light of day and that no one—Jeremy did not count, the victim would naturally protest—seemed to care.

After careful consideration of his unimposing bank account John invested a part of it in a horse despite the teasing of Aunt Roberta, who accused him of "joining the cavalry"—to wit, Warren Blake and the troop of undergraduates that clattered over the roads at Crusader's heels. He was not a thoroughbred, blue ribbon winner, like Crusader, but just a plain horse that, with buggy attached, could trot a mile in something less than five minutes or if you weren't particular as to gait would bear you in the saddle all day with equal willingness. He was a big, raw boned beast with a Roman nose and eyes continually showing white, which quite belied his placid temper, and John called him Lightning. So John and Lightning, two industrious campaigners, between whom a perfect understanding existed, went about their business of getting votes—and learning.

Lightning's duties generally consisted in standing under the shade of some tree, while John, a volunteer who at least earned his dinner, worked with the farmers in the fields. And over the dinner table or when the day's work was done John chatted with the farmers. The labor was good for his muscles and digestion, and the chat was good for his soul.

Often he found that Jeremy Applegate or one of Jeremy's fellow scouts had blazed the trail for him. But sometimes he found skeptics who asked pertinent questions.

"Why should I vote for ye?" asked Dan Criswell, a citizen of Baldwin township, one evening.

John began to patter the stock party arguments, which carried conviction neither to the skeptical Criswell nor to a sudden—to himself. He broke off abruptly in the middle of a sentence.

"As you say," he laughed uncomfortably, "Why should you vote for me?"

"Does sound kind of foolish, don't ye? Reckon ye won't have nothing to do with the tariff or the single gold standard and prosperity neither. The hull party won't make ye git after the lawbreakers if ye're clobbered by Jow with Jim Sheehan and he don't want it."

"What I want to know is are ye honest—or will ye take orders?"

"That sounds logical," John assented. "It's common sense. Only most candidates think we're too simple to think on't. An' I don't know as they're far wrong," he added thoughtfully.

When John left, however, Criswell shook hands with him cordially. "I guess I'll vote for ye this time. I can't swaller the hull ticket, though—stomach wouldn't stand it. Ye look like ye'd be yer own man. Leastways, I'll chance it."

And John replied, troubled, "I won't regard that as a promise. I'm not sure that you ought to vote for me."

Another day he met one Sykes, a hill farmer, a little, wizened fellow who looked as though he had worn himself out in the struggle to wring a living out of the steep slopes.

"I ain't voting," he said.

"Well," John laughed cheerfully, "if I can't get a vote I'll be content with information. Will you tell me why you won't vote?"

"Well, if ye will have it, Jim Sheehan nominated ye. If ye'd been the right kind of man he wouldn't 'a' had nothing to do with ye. Anybody he's fer, I'm against. I recollect when he come to Plumville, nothin' but a drinkin' bum. An' now he's got 'rich, buildin' bad streets an' roads an' taxin' me heavy to pay fer it while it keeps me scratchin' to get the interest on my mortgage. How do I know he's crooked? I don't know—I feel it. An' I know that no one gets the nomination less'n he says so. Or Murchell—an' they're tarred with the same stick."

John's face was grave. "Then you ought to vote the opposition ticket. I'd rather you'd do that than not vote at all."

The momentary flicker of passion died down. "What's the use?" was the reply, dully given. "However I vote some feller like Sheehan gits on top."

John sought counsel from his father. But to the judge Caesar's wife—that is to say, his party and all things thereto appertaining—was above suspicion; not so the motives of him who raised a question. So he took his trouble to whom John's deference had attracted Sheehan's attention, a big man, kindly, shrewd, with wisdom in the raw. He listened sympathetically as John poured out his tale.

"It's like what Sykes says. It ain't what we know—it's what we feel. When Jim Sheehan gits a public contract, we feel there's somethin' crooked about it. When a man gits a nomination, we feel that he's made some kind o' deal with Sheehan. When we put up a man on our own hook, an' he's nominated—which ain't often—we find he's gone over to Sheehan. An' that ain't feel, it's know. Jim Sheehan's represented; we ain't. It ain't right."

"Then why don't you get together and fight?"

"We've got to live," Cranshaw answered simply. "We don't lay by money fast enough to keep us without workin'. We ain't got the time ner the trainin' to make a good fight against him. We've got no leader." His eyes, through the bushy brows, rested with an almost wistful light on the troubled countenance before him. "An' I'd take a large sized man fer the job."

John just then felt very small. He went to Plumville, an angry, grimy, bustling, growing hive of workers, with its drones too. He had the key to interpret what he saw. He was permitted to go through the mills and meet the men; he came out with hands blackened from much contact with their hands and in the smut he felt a sort of pride. What he had read on the farmers' brown faces he saw on their red, scorched ones—the dull-eyed suspicion of those used to paternity before election and neglect afterward.

Under the careful ciceroneage of Sheehan's lieutenants he was led, into a flit club and saloon, where he shook hands with many more men, who gizzled vast quantities of liquor and sneered openly at his abstinence. He was told that here he would meet "men who counted," he did meet such men—bentish things, moral idiots, chieless creatures bound together by the cohesive force of common interest—plunder. This army never slept, could always be relied upon.

"What a self centered beast I have been!" he cried within himself. "All this rottenness under my nose, and I have never perceived it!" A great fear came upon him—fear of the responsibility of that into which he felt himself being carried.

And there was another thing that deepened those twin creases between his eyes.

One morning a very sleek, high stepping cob drawing a very elegant trap halted before his office, a circumstance of which you may be sure New Chelsea took prompt and interested notice.

"Why, hello!" he exclaimed, extending his hand to the visitor. "This is fine!"

She observed him hesitatingly. "It is Mr. Dunneade, isn't it? Yet I think I should have recognized you anywhere. You haven't changed much, though it has been a long time since I last saw you. Aren't you ashamed of having neglected me so long?" she concluded indignantly.

"Well, you see, Katherine," he grinned, lamely explanatory, "I've been out campaigning."

"You might at least have come to report your progress to an interested constituent. Are you aware that you and I are going over to inspect the new house this afternoon? It's completed, and you've never seen it yet."

"But I ought to see some men!"

"Do you think," she interrupted him again, "that I've set all the tongues in New Chelsea clacking for nothing? Your campaign can wait. We shall start at 2."

He hesitated, then surrendered. "Oh, hang it all! I've earned a holiday. I'll go."

She beamed brightly on him. "That's nice of you. And we shall ride. I want to race Crusader against that new steed I've heard so much about."

"Oh, no!" he protested. "The aristocratic Crusader would probably snub him, and Lightning is very sensitive about such things."

"It is time," she insisted firmly, "that Crusader acquired a more democratic spirit. At 2, remember!"

A few minutes before the appointed hour New Chelsea saw Lightning—curled as never before in his life—amble in his own peculiar fashion up Main street to the opening in Hampden's hedge, whence he soon emerged in the company of the satiny Crusader. They came after a half hour's ride to a long, straight avenue, once the rain washed lane to a farmhouse, newly graded and graveled and flanked by precise rows of towering poplars.

"It was for the trees we took this place," she told him. "And for the view. Do you wonder?"

They stopped and looked down into the valley lying silent before them like some vast, deserted amphitheater of the gods. The town, seen through the thin, bluish haze of September, seemed asleep; then, ever, half hidden by its trees; the spires of the churches and schoolhouse standing up like exaggerated exclamation points. "Which

"Just it?"

"No," he cried. "There is the use of strength, if one is strong, to support the weak!" He paused abruptly, conscious of the triteness and futility of his words, with the shyness of the man who, self conscious without conceit, fears to uncover his ideals before unsympathetic eyes.

"Oh, John Dunneade," she replied impatiently, "you're so disappointing, with your schoolboy platitudes."

He made no answer; the quick red rushed to his face. And why should she interest herself in his ideals? A long, troubled silence fell between them.

"John," she said suddenly, "was it necessary for you to criticize and quarrel with my father?"

"I did not criticize him," he responded quickly, "and there is no quarrel that I am aware of. We merely differed in opinion on a business matter, each believing he was right."

"Will you tell me why you think him wrong?"

He found his lips sealed. "I haven't criticized him," he said gravely, "and I can't begin now, especially to his daughter."

Is perfectly absurd," she flouted his fancy, "since New Chelsea is nothing so emphatic."

Inside, the decorators—not from New Chelsea—were putting the finishing touches on the last room, and most of the furnishings were in place. He found that the Globe had done the house grave injustice. It was not at all "palatial," but planned with an eye to comfort and harmony—"livableness," Katherine called it—and marked by extreme simplicity—of the expensive sort however.

Under Katherine's guidance John was shown the whole house from garret to cellar. At least half of his admiration he gave to his guide. He had never before known her as she was that afternoon, girlish, enthusiastic, absorbed in her woman's task of home-making, never so alluring. Afterward they rested on the shady eastern terrace.

"Do you know," she said, "you haven't exclaimed once. Not a single 'Fine!' or even a 'Bully!' You're a very satisfactory person—in some ways. Do you like it?"

"Very much," he answered with such evident sincerity that she was content. "But why this air of permanence?"

"Because this is to be home. Of course we shall be in the steel city during the winter, with a month in New York for the opera. But this is home. It seems lonely and out of the way now, I suppose, but that won't last long. The Sangers have bought the place next to this. The Flicks, and maybe the Hawes, are coming. We'll soon have our own little colony."

"And the siege of New York?"

"A foolish expedition from which we have discreetly retreated." Her laugh did not ring quite so free as usual. She continued: "It was humiliating, toadying to people who despise you for your presumption." The crimson rushed resentfully to her cheeks. He said nothing.

"Thank you for not asking questions. It's foolish for me to be so sensitive about it, but"—she shrugged her shoulders—"our experience wasn't pleasant. I like the new rich. I like to meet men who are doing things—who are making their own conquests, not living on the fruits of others' conquests."

He sat silent. To win, always to win, was the sum of this girl's philosophy, with no thought of its cruelty or realization that for every victor there must be many losers. And wealth, power, the things a man had, were the badge of his victory.

She was laughing at him. "What do you think when you retire into yourself so rudely? Anything profitable or interesting?"

"I'm afraid not. Do you think winning is all of life?"

According to Herbert Spencer, love between man and woman arises from each serving as the representative of the other's ideal. This ideal must be preserved if love is to remain, and to insure its preservation there should be not less, but greater, regard for appearances between husband and wife than between any other people. Equality of rights should also be recognized. A man cannot regard as his type of the ideal one whom he tries to command, and whom he has lowered by denying an equality of privilege with himself.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Daily Gazette, November 20, 1872.—Flags in the city were displayed at half mast today on receipt of the intelligence of Horace Greeley's death, and a feeling of profound sorrow over this unexpected event pervades the entire community.

Proposition for a Paper Mill: We are authorized to state that Peter Myers and A. C. Bates will take one-half of the stock necessary to erect a paper mill in this city, the cost not to exceed $30,000 to be completed early next spring, provided other property will take the balance. This is a fair proposition and it should meet with a second. There's money in the business.

The Wealth of Our Country: A recent table completed by E. L. Carpenter, county clerk, gives some valuable and interesting figures. The table shows that there are 451,494 acres of farming lands in Rock county valued at $11,187,696, an average valuation of $24.78 per acre. There are also $4,101,692 worth of city and village lots in the county. We possess in the way of stock, 15,708 horses, 31,351 cattle, 200 miles and asses, 44,250 sheep, and 30,780 swine. The total value of real and personal property is $20,028,201.

The Horse Disease: The horse disease, during the past day or two, has been at its height, and from this time we may look for its subsidence, though several weeks will elapse before it is entirely eradicated from our midst.

Come, let us do our shopping early, before the Christmas rush begins, and buy a roll with tresses curly or buy two dolls—if they are twins. This theme is all that I can think of, the only subject for a lay; the bubbling spring that poets drink of for me is dry as last year's hay. I've scratched my head for hours together to find a subject for a song, and there is nothing but the weather—and that I've sung about too long. I've racked my brain till it is popping.

ANCIENT ADVICE disturbed the household's restful calm; there's nothing left but Christmas shopping, that one in verses may embalm. Oh, sisters, do your shopping early, before the rushing throngs begin, for when you reach the portals pearly, St. Peter will not let you in! There's nothing doing in this valley, the country's quiet as the town; gone are the caucuses and the

THE DAILY NOVELETTE

On the Bridge

Two men stood on the bridge at midnight.

Overhead, in heaven's deep vault, the stars twinkled cutely; below, the black waters swirled and eddied like anything.

"You black-hearted, white-livered, green-eyed, purple-nosed son of an ingrate," cried Amos Winkhammer, "I won that election bet and you know it!"

"You sawed-off, hammered-down, dog-faced, misspoken pigsticker," replied Eric Stumphinder, with some heat, "I won the bet and you lost it, and for two pins I'd push you off this here bridge."

"Ah!" hissed the other, "I'll push you off for one pin, and a rusty one at that. You brazen, faced nincompoop of a decadent family, I'd push you off free of charge!"

The moon stepped behind a cloud as they scuffled.

IT'S RISKY

IT'S A BIG RISK to hold an auction sale unless it is well advertised. You put up $2000 worth of property for sale; maybe it will bring $2000; maybe $1500; maybe less. It's up to you.

It all depends upon how well you advertise it. One that is thoroughly advertised cannot help but be a success. Almost every sale that is advertised in the Gazette brings more than the proprietor expected.

You can save a few dollars by trying to get along with a few bills or running a small ad in a paper with little circulation, but how about results? Will you find that you have saved anything when you count your money at the close of the sale?

Dare you take chances on $2000 worth of property to save a few dollars at the outset?
